Miscellaneous.

Courting in the Country.

BY MRS. SERA SMITH.

German is lowest men—SHAKESPEARE.

It was a bright summer afternoon when we galloped into the tidy, brick village of Grey. Without any knowledge of concert, we certainly put ourselves upon our best paces, and most approved equestrian attitudes, as we dashed down the principal street—subdued in the excitement of our spirits, we indulged in an exhalation of vanity, pardonable in a trio, but at which we should, either of us, have blushed singly, for we exchanged glances, which each interpreted in his heart as meaning—

"Two looking cavaliers we—such not to be seen every day."

Unluckily for us, it may have been luckless, a great habitual meeting was held in the village at the time, and every hotel, tavern, boarding house was full to overflowing; full of men with solemn looks, grave with the affairs of the times—men with oracular words, or piercing eloquence, upon the subject of turpitude or no turpitude; men with long speeches in their pockets, ready to be extemporized—men who had on their "Sunday best," even combed their carrot locks, and now moved uneasily in stiff white collars, and now cowhide shoes. What were we to those?

At first, we glanced at our modish habiliments with exultation, but, as file after file of these sturdy farmers came by, a lurking sense of effeminacy crept over us; and our trim boots and faultless tailor work grew ridiculous, and reminded us of men made by the tailor. Besides we were a pitiful minority, and one must have some grand truth to sustain him well in truth's position; besides we were hungry as panthers, which is of itself apt to impart a sneaking aspect.

Now remember that, Coz; a hungry woman does not, as you women imine, look spiritual—she only looks dull.

Wisely said, good cousin, we will dispense with that, but go on.

Well, after being baffled half a dozen times, I fear we began to look a less cavalierly. Then we bethought ourselves of the farm-houses in the neighborhood, and started again in tolerable style.

There was one with an avenue of trees, up which we rode, and I knocked with my whip upon the door. It was opened by a girl with an arch look, as much as to say, you didn't expect such a pretty girl, did you? No more did we, and we were all ourselves instantly.

Of course, Frank; but what next?

Why, she could take only one. Here was a dilemma; but the neighbors would each take one. But then such a pretty housemate—

—which should stay? We declared she should decide. She laughed and shook her curls, and tapped her small foot upon the floor, and her ribbons fluttered in the wind; and altogether made as pretty a picture as one could wish to see.

We looked interesting—I apprehended our best looks were on; we slightly improved our position in the saddle—Richard took off his cap on account of the heat, but you remember his fine hair! William smiled; but then his teeth! I was grave and indifferent.

Frank, Frank.

True, upon my word, cousin. The little beauty glanced from one to the other, laughing and blushing, and refusing to say, but at length she pitched upon your cousin Frank.

Now, cousin spare your invention, you know, Frank, I credit only half what you are telling, and I will not believe the story itself.

Oh! Frank, Frank, how your sex is given to fibbing—well, it is an instinct with you.

There you are out, cousin, for the women have the training of us. You think it quite incredible that the girl should choose me—

—humph—

Pah, cousin, don't look fierce—I dare say you were irresistible; but then Richard is so handsome.

Confound that Richard—I wish I had left him out altogether in the excursion.

Well, now, do finish it, for the present the lady has just elected her spouse, and he is yet perched upon his horse, fierce and hungry.

Most unheroic, I confess. Well, the girl ushered me into the nearest little room—the floor sanded and green boughs in the chimney. Here sat an elderly woman, quite deaf of that—and the beauty screamed—

Frank, said I.

Mr. Frank, Grandmother.

Yes, yes, get him a chair, Jennie. I think we are well acquainted, Jennie. Perfectly, Frank.

What does he say, Jennie?

O, he says—it's a fine day. I interposed. All this time a handsome youth was standing by the window, who certainly was not deaf, for I heard him mutter—

Well, that's what I call being mighty home like.

Then Jennie spread the table, and all was so fresh, so nice—and all of Jennie's own making. And then she laughed, and chatted and said so much; one half I really believe, to tease the youth, whom I learned to call George, because she did, only I put the Mr. to it.

I soon found they were lovers, he dying of jealousy, and she the village beauty, and a sad coquette to the bargain. But then her coquetry was so becoming—not cool and calculating, but merely the ebullition of spirits in one who had been used to admiration; and then her pretty pettishness, her gay laugh, and real goodness at her heart. I learned this by a thousand indications before I had been there a week.

Indeed, Jennie was the very perfection of a rustic beauty, and I would not have her criticized for the world. Sabbath day I went to church, walked beside the little belle with her laughing eyes dancing in my face, her musical voice close to my ear, and beautiful cheek like a peach just visible among the curls that half hid her bonnet.

You make a long story, Frank.

But think what a beautiful subject, Coz.

Yes, Frank.

I don't remember what the sermon was about, but the singing was excellent, for Jennie had a voice like a bird. We all stood at prayers, and then I observed the men turn their backs upon the minister, but the women did not. And then when the church was over the men left the house before the women, which gave them a chance to see nearly all as they came out, and then such blooming faces, and so many black slippers, and white stockings, and dresses a trifle shorter than you wear them in New York.

George walked a little in the rear of Jennie and me, looking sulky—and I dare say wished me to the north pole.

Where you deserved to be, Frank; what right had you to make him unhappy by your ridiculous flirtation?

You shall see, sweet Coz, I was doing him a benefit. These country lovers are excessively green! they let a woman feel that she has a tremendous power over them, and then she abuses it, or else cares nothing about them.

Aye, Frank, but they are truthful and earnest, and that is the only love to be prized. Your managing lover is good for nothing at all.

I deny your premises; Coz. A man must be master of himself at least in appearance, or despair to win the love of woman's heart. Your whining lover is a sorry object. But to my story. Jennie was all day gay as a lark—she sang at the wheel, old ballads, such as we find in Percy—she played for fun, told fortunes in tea grounds, and seemed the very impersonation of cheerfulness. The old lady busied herself in the kitchen, and George was out on the farm. We talked everything but sentiment; for when I attempted that she laughed in my face, and bade me hush such nonsense. I recited poetry and she opened her eyes, and looked incomprehensible, and then George began to laugh, and I felt ridiculous.

We went to a singing school—it was a clear moonlight night. The little beauty never looked lovelier—was never in a sadder mood or in a better spirit for mischief. It was one half to spite George, who staid at home in a fit of the sulks, and I knew it—she didn't care a straw about me, and in revenge just as we reached the door, I snatched a kiss. How the little creature's eyes flashed—she gave me a sound box on the ears, and then ran into the house.

Good night, Mr. Frank she called, as I heard her foot on the stairs.

The grandmother had gone to bed. George sat by the window; it did not command the entrance. He was certainly a very handsome fellow—much handsomer than he was aware of. He had too, an off-hand, assured bearing, that would have been equal to anything, had he not been in love. He was surely and I sat down by the opposite window.

You seem to understand the women, almighty well, said he, rather abruptly.

I should think not, by the way my ears ring. Miss Jane likes to be kissed before folks.

To be sure she does—a right, nice, smart gal she is too, only a little skittish.

I wonder you don't make love to her, Mr. George.

The deuce take her—a fellow never knows what she means—chippy to-day and off to-morrow—'twould be like running after a jack-o-lantern. She'll laugh and talk with any popinjay that comes along.

I hemmed of course, Coz.

A palpable hit, Frank.

And then for the lantern jawed chops of the village, she'll talk herself hoarse with them, and never look at me.

Is she the only pretty girl in town?

George opened his eyes wide. That's it, is it? I'll see.

I redoubled my attentions to Jane—George was away every night; but this only seemed to increase the vivacity of her spirits. I quite neglected my two friends, and half abandoned my rod and line, though the sport could not be improved. At length the night of the singing school arrived. Jane and I were just seated, when in came George with a very pretty girl, though not half so pretty as Jennie. She began turning the leaves of the singing book, and was a long time finding the place, but I could see her color come and go, and her red lips tremble in spite of its compression.

George played his part to perfection, and his companion was in fine spirits, growing every moment more beautiful from her happiness. Poor little Jennie—she was nervous—now chattering like a magpie—and now silent and lost in reverie.

Going home, I touched upon the sentimental, looked at the moon, and thought of you, Coz, and then I recited,

"Oh! thou that dost inhabit in my breast, Leave not the mansion too long tenanted, Lest growing ruins the building fall, And leave no memory of what it was."

Jennie burst into tears. After a while she said—

Come to think about it, Mr. Frank, poetry is always about love, isn't it—I never thought of it before. And then it is always sad.

Poor little Jennie, it was her first touch at the sentimental, the birth of her first grief. I took the occasion to read her a lecture upon truthfulness—the folly of seeking admiration at the sacrifice of love. Even you, Coz, would have been edified, might you have heard it. She gave me for my pains a world of sighs.

The next day I expected to see her quite tender and attentive to George—but no, the little chat was as stately as tragedy queen, and George apparently quite unconcerned.

That night she half cried her eyes out of her head, for at breakfast table they were red and swollen, and she looked quite the pale sentimental beauty. She grew listless—gave over singing—read all the poetry she could find, and at the new moon I found her gathering clover, four-leaf clover and repeating,

New moon, new moon, tell to me, Who my own true love shall be.

My approach stopped the incantation audibly, and the next morning I beheld trefoil with the four leaves—that's an Irishism is it not?—suspended over the principal door. I was careful that George should be the first to pass under it.

I have just received this paper, undoubtedly sent by George or Jennie. It is Jennie's hand writing I am sure.

Married in Grey, by the Rev. Mr. Honny, Mr. George — to Miss Jane —, all of this place.

So Coz, you have the whole history of my excursion, and do you not think it was for good? There is no knowing what might have been the fate of the lovers, had I not been able to impart a little wisdom to George.

The result of experience, cousin?

Rev. William Parsons Lunt, D. D.

CHRISTIAN EXAMINER, New York, June 13, '57.

In our last issue we announced the sad tidings just received, of the death of our friend and brother whose name is at the head of this article. As the first pastor of the Second Unitarian Society in this city, then worshipping in a church on Mercer street; afterwards destroyed by fire, and now in the Church of the Messiah, on Broadway; well known and highly esteemed by many still surviving among us, as by others elsewhere; and in every respect worthy of honor able and affectionate remembrance in our columns, we propose to give some particulars of his last illness and death, as they have reached his family from the friends who were with him.

Dr. Lunt, at the time of his decease, was pastor of the First Congregational Church at Quincy, Mass. He graduated with distinguished honors in the class of 1823, at Harvard University. He commenced the study of the law, but subsequently abandoned it for that of divinity, completing the course of study at the Theological School at Cambridge, in the class of 1828. On the 19th of June of that year, he was ordained pastor of the Second Unitarian Church in this city. He resigned that pastorate on the 17th of Nov. 1835, and was installed at Quincy on the 8th of June, 1835, twenty-two years ago last Monday. He was born in Newburyport, the 21st of April, 1805; and died on the 21st of March, of the present year, at Akabab, a fortified village of Arabia, on the eastern side of the Gulf of that name, which is the eastern horn of the Red Sea, and whose shores are bold and precipitous. Akabab itself is near the shore, flanked to the east and west by mountains rising to the height of eighteen to twenty-five hundred feet. A heap of stones marks the grave of our friend in that desolate spot, while the winds of the desert, sweeping through that wild mountain pass, join the murmurs of the sea in a perpetual requiem.

Dr. Lunt sailed from Boston on the last day of the year 1856, in somewhat delicate health, with a special desire and purpose of visiting the Holy Land, intending to return in the course of this summer. Within nine days' journey of Jerusalem, that city which originally, from its sacred associations and interest, and when taken ill in the desert, from the added hope of securing their successful medical treatment, he so longed to reach, his spirit was called away. On the Sunday before he left home, he preached a farewell sermon to his people, from Psalms cxii. 7; "He led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation." Little did he or they think, though human wisdom and affection would have probably chosen a different one, that God was leading him forth, nevertheless, "by the right way to a habitation;" not, indeed, the earthly and perishing, but the new and heavenly "Jerusalem." Truly, "His thoughts are not our thoughts, neither are our ways his ways."

Mr. Gorham, United States Consul at Jerusalem, on the arrival of Dr. Lunt's traveling companions there, most promptly transmitted to his family, under cover to Dr. Lathrop, of Boston, a statement drawn up by them of the circumstances of his illness and death, naturally judging that "It would be a great consolation to his friends to know that everything was done for him which a feeling of warm friendship could suggest." The statement is so interesting in itself, and so gratifying to our readers, that we gladly transfer a large part of it to our columns.

"While arrangements were being made at Cairo, he sometimes gave expression to fears, lest in his then state of health, he should be unable to support the toils of the journey, and become ill in the desert. Chiefly to meet his wishes, it was expressly stipulated in the contract (with the Bedouin guides we presume) that should any member of the party become so ill as to be unable to travel, the others should wait for his recovery, and share along with him the extra expense incurred."

"On the day previous to starting, he complained of slight indisposition; but on the following morning this had almost entirely disappeared, and he felt no hesitation in beginning the journey at the appointed time. Nothing could at first have been more salutary than the effects of the change of air and mode of life pursued in the desert upon Dr. Lunt's health and spirits. He expressed himself quite invigorated, and as having never felt better in his life; as very glad, indeed, that he had come across the desert previous to returning home. Having throughout made the journey by short and easy stages, he very rarely if ever complained at night of fatigue, and rose every morning invigorated, and nerved with fresh strength to pursue the journey."

"This happy state of things continued without interruption until we pitched our camp near the convent at Mount Sinai. There Dr. Lunt found himself unable to ascend to the top of Gebel Mousa (Mount of Moses, the highest peak of Mount Sinai) and the other mountains; not, however, on account of fatigue and indisposition, but because when he attempted to ascend any height he was seized with giddiness which obliged him to desist. He took long walks, nevertheless, through the neighboring valleys, and frequently expressed the great delight he experienced from the magnificent scenery."

"When we left Sinai his health and spirits seemed quite unimpaired. On that day we travelled only four hours; he ate a hearty dinner, and retired early, apparently in good health. Next morning he complained of having passed an uncomfortable night; and of a bad head-ache. He did not, however, feel so ill as to be unable to go on; but for his comfort, we travelled on that day very slowly, and pitched our tents at an early hour. In the morning he had taken a dose of aperient medicine, but apparently with no good effect, since he still complained of headache and loss of appetite."

"Next morning, Sunday, March 15th, as he still complained, and the bad symptoms were further increased by pain in the region of the stomach, we agreed to remain the whole day where we were, hoping that rest, with fresh remedies, would ensure convalescence. We resorted to such simple remedies as were within reach and the case seemed to demand. Dr. Lunt himself judged that he was suffering from the effects of cold and checked perspiration; and we applied fomentations, hot water to his feet with light diet."

"Next morning he felt better; and as our Bedouins had no water, and none could now be found in the neighborhood, he expressed a wish to go on. On that day we made a short journey. He complained as before, except that the pain had shifted from the stomach and settled in his back. It was his own opinion that the symptoms were rheumatic, and we again fomented and applied the usual remedies. He was able to eat some chicken broth and boiled rice and milk, although his appetite was very small. Next day, he being still indisposed, we travelled little more than six hours, and repeated the remedies. Our efforts were attended with little success, and Dr. Lunt now felt it wise to proceed immediately to Akabab, where we could have the advice and aid of fellow-travellers. We accordingly arranged a couch for him on a dromedary's back, reclining on which he might travel more easily. Proceeding in this way for two days during which his symptoms remained much the same, on the evening of Thursday, March 16th, we arrived at Akabab. There again, at Dr. Lunt's request, we applied the same remedies as before. He did not seem then to have the least suspicion that he was suffering from anything but a cold and rheumatism, aggravated by weakness from loss of appetite, and inability to take strengthening food. In the middle of the night he woke one of the party, told him he could get no sleep, felt so weak as scarcely to be able to rise from his bed, urged us to hurry on next day, by way of Hebron, to Jerusalem, where medical advice could be had, and, for the first time, confessed that for nearly three days he had been suffering from constipation. He was assured that every effort would be made to obtain assistance; and having taken a dose of aperient medicine, whose effect was almost immediate, went to bed, and remained quiet till morning. He then complained of pain in the back, so acute as to make his being moved in any way almost insupportable, and the idea of hurrying on for aid to Jerusalem was quite impracticable."

"Everything we could think of, or our fellow-travellers suggest, to relieve the pain was tried, but without effect. Towards evening it abated, and he expressed himself much better. Soon after, however, feverish symptoms were developed, and in a few hours he became delirious. Fortunately, one of our fellow-travellers had some little experience in the treatment of disease. He saw Dr. Lunt, and to reduce the fever administered two doses of tartar emetic—one grain at eight P. M., and another at midnight. This slightly served; but purging came on towards morning, and his breathing became quick and labored. To relieve this and bring on repose, a small pill of opium and quinine was administered, and in a few minutes he fell asleep. His breathing continued laborious, till about half past five A. M. of Saturday, 21st of March, when it suddenly ceased, and without a struggle he calmly expired."

"In circumstances so mournful, in the middle of the desert, so far from home and friends, we felt all that could be done was to pay the last honors to his remains, and, with however much regret—leave them behind in a foreign grave. The other parties of travellers were obliged to leave Akabab without delay, and that very morning were preparing to prosecute their journey. They at once agreed to delay a few hours for his funeral."

"Acting on their advice we made immediate preparations for the interment. To put the fact of his death beyond all doubt, we applied all the usual tests, even to opening a vein in the arm; but he was gone past all hope. . . . Shortly after nine o'clock A. M., his remains were followed to the grave by all the English, American, and French travellers then at Akabab. The funeral service was performed by the Rev.

Mr. Dowdney, of New York. His grave is on a sandy eminence behind the town of Akabab, and a heap of stones, marks the spot where his ashes repose. To the Governor we entrusted its protection from all disturbance, guaranteed as well by the current superstitions of the Arabs, and received his promise that it should remain intact; and should any of Mr. Lunt's friends visit Akabab in future, he would conduct them to the spot."

"Such is a simple narrative of the particulars of this melancholy event, most melancholy to his friends, and no less so to us. For although our acquaintance with Dr. Lunt was brief, his quiet, gentlemanly manners, genial disposition, and unvarying kindness had won our affection and esteem, and made his sudden death still more powerfully felt. Day by day as we continued our journey, we felt a void which nothing but his presence could fill. May God grant that it be well with him in that other world, a home we shall join him, but whence he can no more return to us."

"Thus closes this simple and touching narrative, drawn up and signed by the two companions of his travels from Europe, one of whom was a young Scotch clergyman, who we learn, was a fellow-student with our brother Edward J. Young, in Germany; and the other, an English gentleman. Their names are W. Schoobred, and B. Hindman. Their generous kindness and fidelity deserve most honorable mention, and will be ever gratefully remembered by Dr. Lunt's family and friends."

Dr. Lunt's mind was of a high order, and was greatly enriched by diligent study. His taste was exceedingly delicate and refined. In his mental habits he was meditative and analytic; but he criticized himself as nicely as he did others. Whatever he saw forth from his pen, either in the pulpit or through the press, was accurately wrought and finished. Hence we believe that a volume of sermons will be easily selected from his drawers which will prove nearly surprised for profundity of thought, force of argument, beauty of illustration or expression. We know that John Quincy Adams, for many years his parishioner, had the highest satisfaction in and admiration of his preaching. He wanted, perhaps, for popular effect, greater apparent warmth and earnestness of manner, though at heart no man was more earnest. His sincerity and the depth of his convictions none who knew him would question; and we thought, when we heard his preaching, some two years ago, that we had never witnessed him in so much emotion. The same was remarked of him on the delivery of his oration at Cambridge, a few years since. There was a charm in his rich and musical voice, and in his polished elocution, which, with the sterling worth of the matter which they enunciated and clothed, made him a preacher of rare gifts and accomplishment."

"That he was not more appreciated during life—as we think he was not by any means as he deserved—was in a great measure owing to peculiarities of temperament. He was naturally reserved. He could not make a friend of everybody. He was tedious in his attachments where there was strong affinity. We have attested to his sincerity; he was very sincere; and he could not easily vent aversion or aloof a regard he did not feel. But where one was admitted to his friendship it was found of the warmest of type; and traits of playfulness, strokes of humor, flashes of wit, nay, bursts of merriment, even mingled in and brightened the outflow of unreserved intercourse between heart and heart. Then, again, in his public manifestations he had no clap-trap, for he abhorred it, especially in the pulpit. The sacredness of the place and its themes, in him, instantly forbade it. He could not for the sake of popular opinion, admiration or applause, stoop. Still more, he was conservative, well known to be so, and indeed, avowedly, but only honestly in the spirit of the Apostolic injunction, to "prove all things, and to hold fast all that was good." It lay not in the mouth of any competent judge to say that he was not ready to prove, examine all things, or that he held fast what he held from anything less worthy than the conviction that it was good."

It may be well supposed, therefore, from what we have said, that in the posthumous walk he must in some respects, have failed. He could not adapt himself to all persons he met. There was not enough suppleness of texture in his constitution to adjust itself to all varieties of character and habit in a large congregation. His general sympathies were not by nature quick to vibrate to every call. But no one was better aware of this or more regretted it than himself. We have been struck, however, at knowing, as we do not this very moment, persons among his parishioners with whom the world would have supposed him to have had little congeniality, who were devotedly attached to him; standing proofs that no worldly considerations, no silly pride, nothing unworthy, nothing, indeed, which he could hold, was in the way of that more general pastoral intercourse and influence which is often and rightly prized. Fidelity of purpose and aim were eminent traits in Dr. Lunt's character in every department of his professional life; and what he did not achieve was his misfortune simply.

His private and his domestic life were most exemplary. The home which is rent by his sudden removal is the monument of the last; and his unblemished purity, his unwavering truthfulness, his high-minded generosity, his pervading devotedness, attest the first. We have known few men, and we have known him intimately, from whom the attempt at reproach would suffer a prompter recoil.

It was a cherished and ardent longing of his heart to tread the soil and trace with his own reverent spirit the places made sacred by the temporal sojourn of our Lord. We knew it when we heard of him entered on the desert. We thought of it in our anticipations of the results of his tour, when that longing should have been gratified. In our turn we longed to hear from his own lips, or read in his own words, the eloquent descriptions, the thrilling reflections he would bring back. But God in his inscrutable wisdom has otherwise ordered. He had traversed the desert till his feet almost touched those sacred precincts, alight prepared as he was by study, by matured powers, by a devout and reverent gratitude and piety, to feel, appreciate, profit by the new privilege and experience. Shall we say, in vain? God forbid. Our friend had traversed, we may say, for the sake of the figure, the Desert of Life. And when best prepared, by a life of faith and of virtue, in God's own time and way, with the vision of heaven, we doubt not, already opening on the mind which was closed to earth by the disease of the body, his spirit entered the HOLY LAND above. Instead of the cold traditions of Palestine, the living presence and welcome of the Saviour, his! Instead of the mute testimonials, of mount, or lake, or village, or city, the songs of the redeemed he is permitted to join!

"BORN TO NO MASTER, NO DEED ARE WE."

The Nation's Birth Day.

Eighty-one years ago this day, the hardy pioneers who had emigrated to this country under British protection, in their Colonial state, rose, threw off their dependence, and took their rank among the nations of the earth. Long had the Colonists suffered by aggressions from the mother country, and vainly had supplicated that arrogant power for redress. Submission they considered no longer a virtue, and open resistance their only alternative. The period had now arrived when the thoughts of the American people were turned in solemn earnest to the great subject of American Independence. In June, of 1776, the Colonial Congress being then in session at Philadelphia, Mr. Henry Lee, a delegate from Virginia, was selected to lay before that body a resolution on this great subject; which he did on the 7th of June, in the following words:

"That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be free and independent States; they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connexion between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be totally dissolved."

The motion thus introduced by Mr. Lee, he followed by one of the most eloquent speeches ever delivered on the floor of Congress. The Resolution was under consideration till July 4th, 1776, when, upon the report of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Philip Livingston, the Thirteen Confederate Colonies dissolved their allegiance to the British Crown, and declared themselves Free and Independent, under the name of the "Thirteen United States of America." This Declaration was directed to be engrossed, and on the 2d of August, of the same year, it was signed by all the members present, and by some who were not present on the 4th of July. The Declaration was received by the people with transports of joy. Public rejoicings took place in various parts of the Union. In New York, the statue of George the III. was taken down, and the lead of which it was composed was converted into musket balls. In Boston, the garrison was drawn up in King street, (since called State street) and thirteen salutes, by thirteen detachments, into which the troops were formed, were fired; the bells of the town were rung in token of felicitation, and the evening concluded with the tearing in pieces and the burning the ensigns of royalty—lions, sceptres and crowns. In Virginia, the exultation exceeded description. On learning the measures of Congress, the Virginia Convention immediately decreed, that the name of the king should be suppressed in all public prayers. They ordained that the great seal of the Commonwealth should represent Virtue as the tutelary genius of the Province, robed in drapery of an Amazon, resting one hand upon her lance, and holding with the other a sword, trampling upon tyranny, under the figure of a prostrate man, having near him a crown, fallen from his head, and bearing in one hand a broken chain, and in the other a scourge. At the foot was characterized the word Virginia, and round the effigy of Virtue was inscribed, sic semper tyrannis. The reverse represented a group of figures; in the middle stood Liberty, with her wand and cap; on one side was Ceres, with a horn of plenty in the right hand, and a sheaf of wheat in the left. Upon the other appeared eternity, with the globe and the phœnix.

Among the list of honored names, which graced that memorable document, the Declaration of Independence, are to be found many of foreign birth. They are classed in the following order:

Matthew Thornton, of Ireland, who was one of the New Hampshire delegation.

Francis Lewis of Landaff, in South Wales, a delegate from New York.

John Witherspoon, a distinguished minister of the Gospel and a patriot of the Revolution, was born in the parish of Yester, a few miles from Edinburgh, and was a true Scotchman. New Jersey delegation.

Robert Morris, the great financier of the Revolution was a native of Lancashire, England.

James Smith, was a native of Ireland, and was the means of raising the first volunteer company in Pennsylvania in opposition to the armies of Great Britain, of which he was captain.

John Taylor, who took an active part in the Revolution, was born in Ireland.

James Wilson, was a native of Scotland.

Thomas McKean, was born in Ireland, and belonged to the Delaware delegation.

Barton Grinnett, was a native of England, a delegate from Georgia.

This band of venerated patriots, who so signally assisted in laying the foundations of our liberties, not one of them survives. They are all gone. But how little is there of the great and good that dies. To their country they yet live, and will live forever! They live in all that perpetuates the remembrance of men on earth, in the recorded proofs of their own great actions.

It remains for us to cherish their memory and emulate their virtues, by perpetuating and transmitting unimpaired, to generations yet unborn, the blessings which they have bequeathed us. If in union and harmony we come up to the work, their fame is imperishable. For their mighty acts and patriotic deeds, are reflected with renewed lustre, as time advances, from liberty's first victory on Bunker's immortal heights, the bloody plains of Monmouth, Sullivan, Saratoga, and Camden, to the last fatal blow at British tyranny on the memorable field of Yorktown, which decided the war, and established the independence of these United States.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT. One of the most terrible disasters in the history of steamboat accidents, occurred on the river St. Lawrence, on Friday last week. The steamer Montreal left Quebec at four o'clock P. M., for Montreal, with about thirty cabin, and some four hundred, more or less, emigrant passengers. When about twelve miles from Montreal, the steamer was found to be on fire, and in the sad disaster which followed upwards of three hundred lives were lost.

Hon. Stephen C. Phillips, of Salem, was one of the victims of this terrible disaster.

CHARGE FOR ALLEGED FRAUD. We understand that a dining room, on the corner of Richmond and Fulton Streets, in Boston, was found to be on fire, last Wednesday morning, and the proprietor has been arrested for an attempt to defraud the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company in having caused said fire, in order to get his insurance.

Whole amount insured $950. Property saved probably $750.

NEW RAILROAD. A project, says the New Bedford Standard, has been started, and is progressing favorably, for the building of a railroad from Fall River to Warren, there to connect with the Providence road. The entire cost is estimated at $150,000, of which it is hoped one-third will be subscribed in Fall River, as that city would be greatly benefited by direct railroad communication with Providence.

ANOTHER STATE TICKET. At the Republican State Convention in Worcester, last week, Nathaniel P. Banks, of Waltham, was nominated for Governor. He is also the candidate of the Americans, but two tickets have been formed for the other offices. For Lieutenant Governor, the Republicans have put up Oliver Warner of Northampton; Attorney General, Thomas D. Eliot of New Bedford; Secretary of State, Joseph White of Lowell; Treasurer, Thomas J. Marsh of Waltham; Auditor, Velorus Taft of Upton.

MILITARY. An election for the choice of a Colonel of the Fourth Regiment will be held at the Armory of the Hancock Light Guards, on the 10th inst, and we learn that the Regimental Drill will take place in this town on the 10th and 11th insts.

Sail Ho! The "Yankee."

The efforts of the people of this age are more particularly directed to exterminating distance, whether by railway, steamboat or sailing vessels. The homely jog-trot, safe, slow-and-sure of the last half century has given place to "lightning express trains," ten-day Atlantic steamers, and clipper ships that rival even the speed of the steamer. Our small sailing craft yachts, trading schooners, pleasure boats, &c., rival and eclipse those of the entire world for speed, and there really seems no end to the determination of builders to keep far ahead of the rest of mankind, so far as sailing qualities are concerned.

Upon invitation of the officers of the Quincy Granite Railway Company last week, we went down the harbor to test the sailing qualities of one of the several sloops they have lately had built for carrying the stone from their Quarries. This company employ several sailing vessels to transport the Quincy Granite to all parts of the Atlantic coast, and rapidity of transit is sometimes of considerable consequence. Hence the building of fast sailing craft for the stone trade. The sloop—in which a large party of gentlemen, some members of the City Government and others were assembled early in the morning—was named the "Yankee," measures something over ninety-nine tons, and will probably carry about one hundred and forty tons. She was built by Mr. James M. Bayles of Port Jefferson, Long Island, and for strength, symmetry of model and sailing qualities she certainly is unsurpassed by any craft of the kind that floats our coast. She has as neat a suit of sails as ever graced a spar, made by Isaiah G. Whiton of Quincy.

The skipper of the "Yankee," Capt. Chas. H. Packard, about as likely a sailor as can often be found, ran us from our moorings at Quincy Point down to the Eastern Shore, some ways below Nahant, with a good ten-knot breeze in a style that showed him to be a thorough seaman, beating everything easily on the way. The day was spent as usual in fishing, etc., to the entire satisfaction of the company, and the run home was made in good time, beating handsomely one of the fastest yachts that sail from the South Shore. We spent a very pleasant day in this excursion, and believe it was one of the most happy, social gatherings to all who were on board. The "Yankee" is an honor to the builder and others who had anything to do with her rig, and will show a good pair of heels to any ambitious craft that may desire to test her sailing qualities.

The passengers, who were so kindly used by the Captain, (Packard,) raised a subscription previous to their return, and have presented to him a magnificent suit of colors.

THE STATE CENSUS. Returns from all but fifteen towns, viz, Medford and Woburn in Middlesex county; Danvers, Ipswich and Nahant in Essex; Lancaster and Harvard in Worcester; Tolland in Hampden; Barnstable, Munroe and Orange in Franklin; Braintree and Needham in Norfolk; Mattapoisett in Plymouth; and Marshpee District in Barnstable, exhibit the following results:

Counties.	No Voters.
Suffolk (complete)	24,745
Middlesex	33,047
Essex	26,318
Worcester	28,884
Hampden	10,266
Franklin	6,119
Hampshire (complete)	7,401
Berkshire (complete)	9,664
Norfolk	18,756
Plymouth	14,137
Bristol (complete)	17,815
Barnstable	7,870
Nantucket (complete)	1,525
Dukes (complete)	1,102
Total,	207,599

Probably the towns yet to come, says the Boston Herald, will increase the voters to 216,000. The number of Representatives will be 240, and thus the whole number of voters required to elect a representative will be 900. Number of Senators 40, requiring 5100 voters to each Senatorial District.

THE BOSTON POST. This old Democratic organ, (for it dates its existence back to the days of Andrew Jackson whose claims to the Presidency it warmly espoused) made its appearance on Monday last, enlarged, and with an entire new dress. It has removed its location from Water to Congress Street, and taken into its service one of Hoe's large cylinder presses. The Post has always been one of the most reliable Democratic papers in the country. Most ably conducted, and in such a spirit of candor, as to command even the respect of its opponents. The Democracy of this State has grown up under its influence—which it has led on to victory in many a political contest.

The literary character of the Post in other respects, is also of a high order. Its rich and racy articles, and other choice reading matter, has rendered it quite a popular journal with the people.

Our friend, therefore, has our congratulations for this new evidence of his prosperity. May he go on to increase and enlarge until his influence shall overshadow the State. And finally, transmit to posterity a name radiant with glory, which we hold together in common, that will endure the test of ages.

PUBLICATION. Harper's Magazine for July has been received from A. Williams & Co., of Boston. The illustrated articles are on the Carib Settlements North Carolina, the Shakers, Lichens, Little Dorrit, comic Family Daguerreotypes, and the Fashions. C. Gill & Co. have it at the Quincy Bookstore.

Poetry.

On Home.

That is not home, where day by day
I wear the busy hour away;
That is not home, where lonely night
Prepares me for the toils of light—
This hope, and joy, and memory give
A home in which the heart can live—
These walls no lingering hope endear,
No fond remembrance chains me here;
Cheerless I leave the lonely sigh—
Eliza, canst thou tell me why?
'Tis where thou art is home to me,
And home without thee cannot be?

Those are who strangely love to roam,
And find in wildest haunts their home;
And some in halls of lordly state,
Who yet are homeless, desolate,
The sailor's home is on the main,
The warrior's on the tented plain,
The maiden's in her bower of rest,
The infant on his mother's breast—
But where thou art is home to me,
And home without thee cannot be?

There is no home in halls of pride—
They are too high, and cold, and wide;
No home is in the wanderer's foot;
'Tis not in place; it hath no bound:
It is the circling atmosphere,
Investing all the heart holds dear;
A law of strange attractive force,
That holds the feelings in their course.

It is a presence undefined,
O'ershadowing the conscious mind;
Where love and beauty sweetly blend
To consecrate the name of friend;
Where 'tis thou art is home to me,
And home without thee cannot be!

My love, forgive the anxious sigh—
I hear the moments rushing by,
And think that life is fleeting fast,
That youth with health will soon be past
Oh! when will time consenting give
The home in which my heart can live?

There shall the past and future meet,
And o'er our couch in union rest,
Extend their cherub wings, and shower
Bright influence on the present hour,
Oh! when shall Israel's mystic guide,
The pillared cloud, our steps decide,
Then, resting, spread its guardian shade,
To bless the home which love hath made?

Daily, my love, shall thence arise
Our hearts' united sacrifice;
And home indeed a home will be
Thus consecrated and shared with thee!

Be Careful of Your Money.

When life is full of health and glee,
Work, work as busy as a bee;
And take this gentle hint from me—
Be careful of your money!
You'll find it true, when friends are few,
When you are short of money.

The single grain of gold in the mould
May spring and give a hundred fold;
More precious than its weight in gold!
Be careful of your money!
The grain you sow, to stacks may grow;
Be careful of your money!

But do not shut sweet Mercy's doors,
When sorrow pleads or want implores;
To help to heal misfortune's sores,
Be careful of your money!
To help the poor who seek your door,
Be careful of your money!

Would you escape the beggar's lot,
The death bed of the tipping cot,
And live in sweet contentment's cot,
Be careful of your money!
And if you need a friend indeed,
Be careful of your money!

Mind You That

Should you love me dearly,
Never breathe it out;
Though he woo sincerely,
Keep him still in doubt.
Tell him love's a bubble—
Leave him still in fears;
More you cause him trouble,
Less he'll cause you tears!

Mind you that;
More you cause him trouble,
Less he'll cause you tears!
Something sad in knowing,
Love can ne'er endure;
If, by too much showing,
Love is made to sure.
Pique him well, and spare not,
Every time you meet;
If you seem to care not,
Soon he's at your feet!

Mind you that;
If you seem to care not,
Soon he's at your feet!

Anecdotes.

My brothers, said a wagging, colored man to a crowd, in all affliction, in all of your troubles, dar is one place you can always find sympathy!

What? Whar?
In de dictionary, he replied, rolling his eyes skyward.

Bill, said Bob, why is that tree called a weeping willow?
'Cause one of de sneaking, plaguey things grew near our school-house, and supplied de master with switches.

A gentleman asked a friend, in a somewhat knowing manner, if he had ever seen a catfish.
No, was the response, but I've seen a rope walk.

I'm afloat! I'm afloat! screamed a young lady of powerful lungs and fingers to match,
as she exercised both at the piano.
You're afloat, she growled an old sea dog;
I should judge you were afloat by de squall
you raise.

A young gentleman recently found himself in the company of three young ladies, and generously divided an orange between them.
You will rob yourself, exclaimed one of de damsels.
Not at all, replied the innocent, I have three or four in my pocket.

WEYMOUTH LANDING, May, 16.

JOHN O. FOYE.

To Those Who Want Farms.

A FARM WITHIN THE REACH OF

EVERY MAN.

THE Ridgway Farm Company has made arrangements by which all who desire to settle or purchase a home can do so.The Farms consist of the best limestone soil of the most superior quality for farming, in rapidly improving places, into which an extensive emigration is now pouring. The property is located in Elk County, Pennsylvania, in the midst of a thriving population of some 10,000. The climate is perfectly healthy, and the terrible plague of the west fever is unknown. It also contains the best quality of Coal and iron. The price to buy it out is from $3 to $20 per acre, payable by instalments, to be located at the time of purchasing, or a share of 25 acres entitling to locate the same for $200,

$4 per month. Discount for every sum of $100 and under, paid in advance, a discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed, and for over $100 a discount of 10 per cent.In considering the advantages of emigrating to this locality the following are presented—
First—The soil is a rich limestone, capable of producing heavy crops, owing to which this settlement has attained its present great prosperity.
Second—It is the centre of the great North
West Coal Basin, and is destined to become one of the greatest business places in the State.
Third—The present state geologist, Dr. Charles T.
Jackson, of Boston, has made a geological survey of the land, analyzed the coal, the iron ore and the limestone. This report together with maps will be furnished to inquirers.Fourth—Three railroads are laid out thro' this property. The Scrubury and Erie Railroad gives us a market for our coal to the lakes—
it runs from Erie to Philadelphia. A large part of this road has been finished, and is now in running order. A heavy force is now working from Erie towards our land in the western direction, thence for the completion of which has been raised—it will soon be finished. The Allegheny
Valley Railroad connects us with New York,
Boston and Pittsburgh. The Venango Road connects us with the West.There are already good turnpike Roads running through this property, various other roads
have been opened to accommodate the emigration and settlement which has already taken place.There are no opportunity equal to it now offered to the man who wants to provide himself
a home in an easy way, and make a settlement
where he can live in prosperity and independence in a climate PERFECTLY HEALTHY.No case of the fever ever having been known to occur in this settlement. It is not like going to the backwoods of the West, among perhaps intolerant people, where there is no society, churches, or schools, where the price of land is high, and where the emigrant, after being used to the most healthy climate in the world, has to endure sickness and pain, and perhaps ruins his health and that of his family. But here is a thriving settlement having three towns, containing churches, schools, hotels, stores, saw mills, grist mills, and everything desired. There is a cash market at hand. The land trade also your amount to over two hundred million feet of lumber. In a short time, owing to the coal,
it will become still more valuable, as a number of iron works and manufactories will soon be started extensively at Warren. Even for those who do not wish to go there, the payments are such that they can easily buy a farm to save their families from want in the future, and obtain a competence by the rise which will take place in the value of lands. By an outlay scarcely missed, a substantial provision can be made.Persons should make early application. Apply or write to E. Jefferson, Secretary, No. 135 Walnut Street, below Fifth, Philadelphia. Letters carefully answered giving full information.Shares or tracts of land can be bought or secured by letter enclosing the first instalment of five dollars, when the subscriber will be furnished with books, maps, &c. Warrantee Deeds given. Persons can also purchase from our Agents.Route from Philadelphia to Tyrone on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, and thence by stage to the land. This is a delightful season to visit St. Mary's—the best hotel accommodation is afforded. Enquire for E. C. Schuyler, Esq.,
the Agent for the property at St. Mary's.

Poetry.

The Stranger's Grave.

Not a stone marked the spot of his last repose,
No willow was over him bending;
Not a rose tree trained by affection's hand,
His fragrance was round him sending.
But he rested in peace by the rolling tide
While the surges his couch were sweeping;
They could break not the spell that was o'er him
cast,
Or disturb his long dreamless sleeping.
He wither'd and deep'd in a far away clime,
With no friend to smooth his lone pillow;
His own sunny home by the mountain side,
Was beyond the dark foaming billow.

They watched for his coming at morning's dawn,
And in gathering shades of even;
But they looked in vain for that lovely form,
For his home was in the starry Heaven.
Oh! fervent the prayers that were raised for him,

Who knew neither pain nor sorrow:
He had passed through the portal of Heavenly light,
Where no cloud darkly rests on the morrow.
He will mingle no more in their songs of praise,
For life's silver harp string is broken:
No more will it wake the sweet music of love,
Or give to fond friendship a token.

Sleep on, sleep on, in thy lowly bed,
Where the dark-robed angel found thee;
With the song of the cliff swallows over thy grave,
And the sea flowers waving around thee.
A friend far dearer than earth can give,
In his arms of love doth fold thee;
A rest far sweeter than earth's repose,
In its silken chains doth hold thee.
Far, far away from the woes of life,
Is the home where the spirit is dwelling;
The glories of heaven have burst on thy soul,
Each vision of darkness dispelling.

Faith.

Ye who think the truth ye saw
Lost beneath the winter's snow,
Doubt not time's snowing law
Yet shall bring the genial thaw.
God in nature ye can trust—
Is the God of mind less just?
Read we not the mighty thought
Once by ancient sages taught?
Though it withered in the blight
Of the medieval night,
Now the harvest we behold:
See! it bears a thousand fold.

Workers on the barren soil,
Yours may seem a thankless toil;
Sick at heart with hope deferred,
Listen to the cheering word:
Now the faithful sower grieves;
Soon he'll bind his golden sheaves.
If Great Wisdom have decreed
Man may labor, yet the seed
Never in this shall grow,
Shall the sower cease to sow?
The fairest fruit may yet be born
On the resurrection morn!

The Sun that Warms.

The Sun that warms the fading flower,
May cheer, not change its doom;
May stay its fate for one brief hour,
But ne'er restore its bloom!
So when the wither'd heart receives
The light of love too late,
Its charm awhile the wreck relieves,
But cannot change its fate!
That heart, if yesterday e'er sad,
Perchance had 'scap'd decay;
That smile, which yesterday had blest,
Comes all in vain to-day!
Then, oh! Love's vow of honor kept—
Nor let Affection wait;
For vain repentance—vain to weep,
When kindness comes too late!

Anecdotes.

A poor Irishman offered an old sauceman for sale. His children gathered round him, and inquired why he parted with it.
Ah, my honeys, answered he, I would not be after parting with it but for a little money to buy something to put in it.

Two old friends met, not long since, after a separation of thirty-five years.
Well, Tom, said one, how has the world gone with you, old boy? Married yet?
Yes, and I've a family you can't match—
seven boys and one girl.
I can match it exactly, was the reply, for I have seven girls and one boy.

Gen. Washington seldom indulged in a joke, or a sarcasm, but when he did he always made a decided hit. During the debate on the establishment of the Federal Army, a member of Congress offered a resolution limiting it to three thousand men; to which Washington suggested an amendment providing that no enemy should ever invade the country with more than three thousand soldiers. The laughter which ensued smothered the resolution.

An Irish soldier who was boasting of his great courage was asked why he ran away in the battle.

Faith, says Pat, my heart is bowled as a lion—so it is; but I happen to have a pair of cowards legs, which always run away with my body when I'd be after fighting the enemy, back luck to them!

In a town in Connecticut, a loafer was brought before a justice for being drunk in the street; the fine being one dollar for each offence. He paid the fine, and was arraigned again next day.

No, you don't Judge, said he; I know the law—one dollar for each offence, and this is the same old drunk!

WEYMOUTH LANDING, May, 16.

JOHN O. FOYE.

To Those Who Want Farms.

A FIRM WITHIN THE REACH OF
EVERY MAN.

THE Ridgway Farm Company has made arrangements by which all who desire to settle or purchase a home can do so.

The Farms consist of the best limestone soil of the most superior quality for farming, in a rapidly improving place, into which an extensive emigration is now pouring. The property is located in Elk County, Pennsylvania, in the midst of a thriving population of some 10,000.
The climate is perfectly healthy, and the terrible plague of the West is unknown. It also has an abundance of the best quality of Coal and Iron. The price to buy it out is from $3 to $20 per acre, payable by instalments, to be located at the time of purchasing, or a share of 25 acres entitling to locate the same for $200, payable $6 per month or 12 1/2 acres payable $4 per month. Discount for every sum of $100
and under, paid in advance, a discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed, and for over $100 a discount of 10 per cent.

In considering the advantages of emigrating to
this locality the following are presented:
First—The soil is a fine limestone, capable of raising heavy crops, owing to which this settlement has attained its present great prosperity.
Second—It is the centre of the great North
West Coal Basin, and is destined to become one of the greatest business places in the State.
It will supply the great Lake market, (according to population and travel the greatest in the Union.) It has five workable veins of the best Bituminous Coal, amounting in the aggregate to over 22 feet, which makes 22,000 tons of coal under each acre. This will make the land of inestimable value.

The eminent state geologist, Dr. Charles T.
Jackson of Boston, has made a geological survey
of the land, analyzed the coal, the iron ore and
the limestone. This report together with maps will be furnished to inquirers.

Fourth—Three railroads are laid out thro' this property. The Sunbury and Erie Railroad gives us a market for our coal to the lakes—
it runs from Erie to Philadelphia. A large part of this road has been finished, and is now in running order. A heavy force is now working from Erie towards our land in the western direction, the means for the completion of which has been raised. It will soon be finished. The Allegheny
Valley Railroad connects us with New York,
Boston and Pittsburgh. The Venango Road connects us with the West.

There are already good turnpike Roads running through this property, various other roads
have been opened to accommodate the emigration and settlement which has already taken place.

There are no opportunity equal to it now offered to the man who wants to provide himself
a home in an easy way, and make a settlement
where he can live in prosperity and independence in a climate PERFECTLY HEALTHY.

No case of the fever ever having been known to occur in this settlement. It is not like going to the backwoods of the West, among perhaps intolerant people, where there is no society, schools, or churches, where the price of land is high, and where the emigrant, after being used to the most healthy climate in the world, has to endure sickness and pain, and perhaps ruins his health and that of his family. But here is a thriving settlement having three towns, containing churches, schools, hotels, stores, saw mills,
grist mills, and everything desired. There is a cash market at hand. The lumber trade last year amounted to over two hundred million feet
of lumber. In a short time, owing to the coal,
it will become still more valuable, as a number of iron works and manufacturing will soon be started extensively at Warren. Even for those who do not wish to go there, the payments are such that they can easily buy a farm to save their rising families from want in the future, or to gain a competency by the rise which will take place in the value of lands. By an outlay scarcely missed, a substantial provision can be made.

Persons should make early application. Apply or write to E. Jeffries, Secretary, No. 135 Washington Street, below Fifth, Philadelphia. Letters carefully answered giving full information.

Shares or tracts of land can be bought or secured by letter enclosing the first instalment of five dollars, when the subscriber will be furnished with books, maps, &c. Warrant Deeds given. Persons can also purchase from our Agents.

Route from Philadelphia to Tyrone on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, and thence by stage to the land. This is a delightful season to visit St. Mary's—the best hotel accommodation is afforded. Enquire for E. C. Schultz, Esq.,
the Agent for the property at St. Mary's.
June 20.

Pure Potash

B. T. BABBITT,

68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POT-
ASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to rectifications, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap;
it makes the Lardies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing
the same results, and will warrant it in all cases,
if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soaps, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for making Lard and Candles.
Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Salt in the Dye.

Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.
May 23.

B. T. BABBITT'S

BEST SALERATUS.

IS prepared entirely different from other Saleratus.
All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the exact locality like the first, (name and picture, twisted Loaf-bread, with a glass effervescing water on the top, as you see in the Dye.)

Full directions for making Bread with Sour
Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry;
also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Scalding Powders, will accompany each package.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
The Dying Child.

Last night, when all was still, mother,
When all things slept but me,
A glorious white-robed form, mother,
Came and stood where I could see.
It came close by the casement,
In the white light of the moon,
But O! the light of that was nought,
To that which filled the room!

I knew it was an angel, mother,
For 'twas all robed in white,
And when the pale moon faded, mother,
It vanished out of sight.
I know it was my warning, mother,
I know that I must die,
That when the meek-eyed violets spring,
I'll be with God on high!

I saw the sun shine, mother,
On dew drops on the grass,
And I almost wept to think, mother,
That from earth, I soon must pass.
And I watched the morning lark, mother,
As he soared to Heaven and sang;
And down through floating clouds, mother,
The liquid music rang.

The New-Year's coming up, mother,
But it, I'll never see,
Or the violet springing in the dell,
Close by the hawthorn tree.
You'll keep my pet canary, mother,
Keep him until I die,
Then open wide his prison door,
And watch him upward fly.

He will sing you a sweet song, mother,
He'll sing it just for you,
And he'll bear my soul to Heaven, mother,
Up through the ethereal blue.
And mother, train the columbines,
That run upon the bowers,
I've sat and watched them many a day,
Through many a long, long hour.

And mother, when the lilies bloom,
And shed their fragrance round,
Don't let them run about all wild,
Or be trampled on the ground.
Mother, forgive my waywardness,
My wickedness—my sin,
And train dear sister Annie,
To be better than I've been.

And mother, dear, please bury me
Close by the running brook,
Where wild violets and minorette
Bloom in that wild sweet nook.
You will make me a low grave, mother,
Close beneath the willow's shade,
Make it where the sunlight quiver
O'er the place where I am laid.

Oh mother! I have got to die,
And leave you, whom I've loved,
But still I'm happy in the thought,
That we shall meet above.
I shall be with you always, mother,
In the dawning of the day;
Though you will not see me, mother,
I'll not be far away.

I never thought last year, mother,
It was the last I'd see,
And I sported gaily through the hedge,
And roamed the meadow lee.
The roses bloomed upon my cheek,
No eye was bright as mine;
My step was light, my heart was free;
Of death there was no sign.

But when the summer faded,
My blooming cheeks were gone,
My eyes grew dim, my light foot, slow,
And soon my soul to Heaven will go.
And when the morning sun does shine
On the valley and the wood,
I shall be far away, mother,
And mingling with the good.

Now kiss me yet again, mother,
I scarce can see you more:
What is that shadow on the wall?
That form within the door?
Ah! now I know dear mother,
It is an angel come;
He'll bear me safely in his arms:
Good bye! my race is run.

And when the twilight shadows,
Crept through the vine-clad door,
They rested on a form of clay,
And the mother watched no more.
All in the lengthened gleaming,
When the shadows on the wall,
Crept and faded in the darkness,
The dying child was called.

KATE CARLTON.

Anecdotes.

Two country attorneys overtaking a wagoner, and thinking to crack a joke on him, asked why his horse was so fat and the rest so lean. The wagoner knowing them to be "limbs of the law," said:—

"That the fore horse was a lawyer and the rest were his clients."

You've destroyed my peace of mind said a desponding lover to a trust lass.
It can't do you much harm, John, for 'twas an amazing small piece you had, anyway! was the quick reply.

Jack did you carry that umbrella home that I borrowed yesterday?
No father; you have often told me to lay up something for a rainy day, and as I thought it would rain before long, I have laid the umbrella up.

To Those Who Want Farms.

A FIRM WITHIN THE REACH OF EVERY MAN.

THE Ridgway Farm Company has made arrangements by which all who desire to settle or purchase a home can do so.

The Farms consist of the best limestone soil of the most superior quality for farming, in a rapidly improving place, into which an extensive emigration is now pouring. The property is located in Elk County, Pennsylvania, in the midst of a thriving population of some 10,000. The climate is perfectly healthy, and the terrible plague of the west fever is unknown. It also has an abundance of the best quality of Coal and Iron. The price to buy it out is from $8 to $20 per acre, payable by instalments, to be located at the time of purchasing, or a share of 25 cents entitling to locate the same for $300, payable $6 per month or 12-13 acres per $100 and under, paid in advance, a discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed, and for over $100 a discount of 10 per cent.

In considering the advantages of emigrating to this locality the following are presented:—
First—The soil is a rich limestone, capable of raising heavy crops, owing to which this settlement has attracted the notice of the West.
Second—It is the centre of the great North West Coal Basin, and is destined to become one of the greatest business places in the State. It will supply the great Lake market, (according to population and travel the greatest in the Union.) It has five workable veins of the best Bituminous Coal, amounting in the aggregate to over 22 feet, which makes 22,000 tons of coal under each acre. This will make the land of inestimable value.

The eminent state geologist, Dr. Charles T. Jackson of Boston, has made a geological survey of the land, analyzed the coal, the iron ore and the limestone. This report together with maps will be furnished to inquirers.

Third—Three railroads are laid out thro' the property. The Suburban and Erie Railroad gives us a market for our coal to the lakes—it runs from Erie to Philadelphia. A large part of this road has been finished, and is now in running order. A heavy force is now working from the west end of the road in the western direction, the means for the completion of which has been raised—it will soon be finished. The Allegheny Valley Railroad connects us with New York, Boston and Pittsburgh. The Venango Road connects us with the West.

There are already good turnpike Roads running through this property, various other roads have been opened to accommodate the emigration and settlement which has already taken place.

There are no opportunities equal to it now offered to the man who wants to provide himself a home in an easy way, and make a settlement where he can live in prosperity and independence in a climate PERFECTLY HEALTHY.

No case of the fever ever having been known to occur in this settlement. It is not like going to the backwoods of the West, among perils, churches, or schools, where there is no society, health and that of his family. But here is a thriving settlement having three towns, containing churches, schools, hotels, stores, saw mills, grist mills, and everything desired. There is a cash market at hand. The lumber trade last year amounted to over two hundred million feet of lumber. In a short time, owing to the coal, it will become still more valuable, as a number of iron works and manufacturing will soon be started extensively at Warren. Even for those who do not wish to go there, the payments are such that they can easily buy a farm to raise their rising families from want in the future, or to gain a competence by the rise which will take place in the value of lands. By an outlay scarcely missed, a substantial provision can be made.

Persons should make early application. Apply or write to E. Jeffries, Secretary, No. 135 Walnut Street, below Fifth, Philadelphia. Letters carefully answered giving full information.

Shares or tracts of land can be bought or secured by letter enclosing the first instalment of five dollars, when the subscriber will be furnished with books, maps, &c. Warrants for Deeds given. Persons can also purchase from our Agents.

Route from Philadelphia to Tyrone on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, and thence by Stage to the land. This is a delightful season to visit St. Mary's—the best hotel accommodation is afforded. Enquire for E. C. Scholz, Esq., the Agent for the property at St. Mary's.

Pure Potash

IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington street, N. Y.,
And 38 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cans, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.

12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Laundries and Hotels.

Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for the laundry or biscuit baking, consequently making it into a new article.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on shoes.

All the above directions accompany the cans.
May 23.

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,

IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cakes, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked; thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first, (name the picture, twisted Leaf-bread, with a glass encircling water on the top, as you see in the bill.)

Full directions for making Bread with Sour Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry, also for making Soda Water, also, directions for making Seidlitz Powders, will accompany each package.

68 and 70 Washington street, N. Y., and

Miscellaneous.

He's Nobody but a Printer.

O! he's nobody but a printer, exclaimed Miss Ellen Durce, a flattering and foppish girl to one of her female friends, who was speaking in terms of praise and commendation of Mr. Barton Williams, a young intelligent printer.

Well, Miss Ellen, you speak as though a printer was not entitled to respectability. I hope you will explain yourself, replied Miss Mary Crossman.

Well, I hope you will excuse me. I do not think it becoming for a young man who has to work for a living to try to move in the society of those who are his superiors. And, moreover, he might win the affections of a girl superior to him in worth and rank; and then do you think her parents would be pleased? I know I would rather be an old maid all my days than to marry a poor printer, a man who has to toil day by day, and then, oh, think of being ranked among the poor.

Then you think that they are beneath you?

Yes, ma'am, of course.

Both in world and intellect, too, I suppose, do you?

Are you superior to a Franklin, to a Blackstone, to a Gamble, and many other eminent men who were printers? Or do you believe your intellectual powers soar above those of a Greeley, or of a Willis, and many other distinguished printers of the present day?

O! now and then you may find a respectable one; but they are few and far between. As for Mr. Williams, I do not think him a Franklin, or a Blackstone, or anything else much.

Nor do I consider him a Franklin or a Blackstone either; but I do think him a very intelligent, handsome young man, and I expect to treat him as such.

Well I expect to treat him as beneath my notice.

Now, Miss Dupree, I think you ought to reflect upon what you are saying, and have some respect for my feelings. You know not what you may come to before you die.

Well, I don't think I will ever come to be the wife of a printer, or anybody who has to labor; nor do I intend to countenance such, either.

Miss Crossman remained silent for some time while her face reddened with indignation—Mr. Williams was her lover and a very good looking man he was. He was of ordinary size, fair complexion, dark hair, and whiskers jet black, and a high prominent forehead, lively and intelligent in conversation, and fluent and affable in his address.

A gentle rap was heard at the door, and the servant immediately announced Mr. Williams.

He entered the parlor, and Miss Crossman arose to introduce them.

Miss Dupree, Mr. Williams.

Miss Dupree, affected to be polite, she returned a slight bow, and coolly said:

Good evening sir.

Mr. Williams and Miss Crossman conversed freely, mostly on literary subjects, upon which both were well posted; and of course they entertained each other pleasantly, while Miss Dupree sat as though she was in despair, now and then giving a lazy nod to anything said to her.

Mr. Williams has gone, and Miss Dupree turned to Miss Crossman and said—

Mary, I am really astonished at you. You are certainly in love with that fellow. Well you may do as you like but I can assure you I'll never condescend to keep company with a printer, mumbled Miss Dupree.

Miss Dupree took her leave, and Miss Mary Crossman was left to think of love, and matrimony, and future bliss.

Ten years were past. A man and his wife were seated before a blazing fire. The evening was extremely cold, and the wind blew fierce and keen. Yes—the editor of the — was housed with his wife in their stately mansion, furnished in the finest style, and lighted brilliantly with costly chandeliers. They were the parents of four intelligent children. It was an hour after sundown, the bell rang for tea. A rap was heard at the door, and upon opening it, there stood a woman, pale and dejected, apparently not far from the grave. She had with her three ragged children, shivering with the cold. The gentleman and lady asked them in to the fire.

Sir, said the poor woman, will you be pleased to give me a little money to buy some bread for my hungry children. My husband has been drinking for the last three weeks, and left me without a morsel to eat for the poor, innocent children, or any fuel to keep them warm, and they weep bitterly.

Where do you live, ma'am? said the gentleman.

In the garret of the Phoenix Hotel, sir.

How long has your husband been addicted to drink? asked the gentleman's wife.

About three years.

Madame, rejoined the generous editor; I am really sorry for you, and of course, shall bestow upon you such charity as you deserve. Will you relate your misfortunes.

Mine is a sad story. I was brought up in affluence; my father was a wealthy merchant in High Street; my husband was rich when we were married. We took a tour to Europe and we returned home and lived happily two years. Mr. Brooks was a gay fashionable young man. He spent money freely, and lived extravagantly. Three years more, and he was considerably on the declining ground, and finally by high living and unnecessary expenditures of money, we were dispossessed of our property, and then my husband took to drinking, and now I am a beggar with children depending upon my success for a living. And as such I beseech you in behalf of my poor little children to bestow upon me such charity as you feel disposed to grant.

Her story was soon told and met a kind response from a generous heart. The lady of the house recognized the poor woman, but she did not feel disposed to make herself known but ushered them into the dining room and sat down with them to a hot supper.

Madame, said the lady, what was your maiden name?

Ellen Dupree.

O! Ellen, have you come to this?

The poor woman was so overcome with gratitude and surprise that she could not utter a word. She thought hers a familiar voice; she had heard it before, but she could not remember when or where; and after a long time she murmured:

I think I have known you in times past, but I cannot remember your name.

What is your name my good lady?

Mary Crossman was my name when I knew you.

Mary who? Crossman.

O! God. Who is your husband?

My husband is a printer.

The poor woman remembered being introduced, before her marriage, to Mr. Williams, and she remembered too, how cold and indifferent she treated him on that occasion.

Yes, nobody but a printer, went like a dagger to her heart. That printer was her benefactor and friend. Young ladies if you marry an industrious and intelligent (printer) man, and become wealthy in your old age, you do well, but if you marry a vain foppish dandy, of the "codfish" aristocracy and non compos mentis order, and should be brought from affluence in youth to beggary in your old age, you do worse.

Remember that ladies, and make the proper improvement.

Bodily Carriage.

Instead of giving all sorts of rules about turning out the toes, and straightening up the body, and holding the shoulders back, all of which are impracticable to many, because soon forgotten, of a feeling of awkwardness and discomfort which procures a willing omission; all that is necessary to secure the object is to hold up the head and move on! letting the toes and shoulders take care of themselves.

Walk with the chin but slightly above a horizontal line, or with your eyes directed to things a little higher than your head. In this way you walk properly, pleasantly, and without any fear, or restraint, or awkwardness. If any one wishes to be aided in securing this habitual carriage of body, accustom yourself to carry the hands behind you, one hand grasping the opposite wrist.

The English are admired the world over for their full chests, and broad shoulders, and sturdy frames, and manly bearing. This position of the hands behind the body is a favorite with them, in the simple promenade in garden or gallery, in attending ladies along a crowded street, or in public worship.

Many persons spend a large part of their waking existence in the sitting position. A single rule, well attended to in this connection, would be of incalculable value to multitudes—use chairs with the old-fashioned, straight backs, inclining backward, and sit with the lower portion of the body close against the back of the chair at the seat; any one who tries it, will observe in a moment a grateful support of the whole spine. And we see no reason why children should not be taught from the beginning to write, and sew, in a position requiring the lower portion of the body and the shoulders to touch the back of the chair all the time.

Rising in the World.

You should bear constantly in mind that nine-tenths of us are, from the very nature and necessities of the world, born to gain a livelihood by the sweat of the brow. What reason have we, then, to presume that our children are not to do the same? If they be, as now and then one will be, endowed with extraordinary powers of mind, those powers may have an opportunity of developing themselves; and if they never have that opportunity the harm is not very great to us or to them. Nor does it hence follow that the descendants of laborers are always to be laborers.

The path upwards is steep and long, to be sure. Industry, care, skill, excellence, in the present parent, lay the foundation of a rise, under more favorable circumstances, for the children. The children of these take another rise, and by-and-by the descendants of these present laborers become gentlemen. This is the natural progress. It is by attempting to reach the top at a single leap that so much misery is produced in the world; and the propensity to make such an attempt has been cherished and encouraged by the strange projects that we have witnessed of late years for making the laborers virtuous and happy by giving them what is called education.

The education which I speak of, consists in bringing children up to labor with steadiness, with care, and with skill; to show them how to do as many useful things as possible; to teach them to do all in the best manner; to set them an example in industry, sobriety, cleanliness and neatness; to make all these habitual to them, so that they never shall be liable to fall into the contrary; to let them always see a good living proceeding from labor, and thus to remove from them the temptations to get at the goods of others by violent or fraudulent means.—William Cobbett.

Facts About Milk.

Cream cannot rise through a great depth of milk. If, therefore, milk is desired to retain its cream for a time, it should be put into a deep, narrow dish; and if it be desired to free it most completely of cream, it should be poured into a broad, flat dish, not much exceeding one inch in depth. The evolution of cream is facilitated by a rise, and retarded by a depression, of temperature.

At the usual temperature of the dairy—fifty degrees of Fahrenheit—all the cream will, probably, rise in thirty-six hours; but in seventy degrees, it will rise in half that time; and when the milk is kept near the freezing point, the cream will rise very slowly, because it becomes solidified.

In wet and cold weather the milk is less rich than in dry and warm, and on this account, less cheese is obtained in cold than in warm, though not thundery, weather. The season has its effects. The milk in spring is supposed to be the best for drinking, hence it is best for calves; in summer it is best suited for cheese; and in autumn, the butter for keeping is better than that of summer. The cows less frequently milked, give richer milk, and consequently, more butter. The morning's milk is richer than the evening's. The last drawn of each milking, at all times and seasons, is richer than the first drawn, which is the poorest.

Spiritualism—the other Side.

MR. EDITOR:—I observe in your paper of the 11th inst., under the caption of "Spiritualism put to the Test," a letter from Prof. C. C. Felt to the writer, in explanation of incidents which occurred during three sittings for Spiritual Manifestations, at my house; and your appended and appropriate motto—"Hear all sides and then decide," is so like an invitation for "more," that I take the liberty to pen a few lines, to enable the reader better to understand to what they refer, not embraced in the replies to the Professor and Dr. Gould; which, I herewith hand you for publication.

Spiritualism is now exciting so much interest; has become so wide-spread; touching, by the wand of inspiration, the deepest elements of man's nature through all gradations of the race, with a force and power unknown to the world's history; re-organizing, by its teachings, the current views of the laws of Society, in Morals and Theology, Science and Philosophy; and thus probing to their centre Man's limitations, by an electric charge from the irresistible truths of Nature.

Hence comes the violent and senseless opposition, from the prejudice of the ignorant; the hate of the bigoted and superstitious; and the blind zeal of those educated to repose upon the present order of things; their craft is in danger, as of old.

But to the seeker of truth and wisdom; those who desire progress, harmony, and the highest development of Man; it demands a calm, candid, deliberate and thorough investigation. Spiritualism ever solicits it with open doors, and the believers willingly offer their utmost aid to elucidate its truths. But it is objected to, as inducing insanity, and alleged immoralities; but those charges originate from ignorance; they belong no more to Spiritualism, than to other parties and sects.

In this investigation, whether it proves true or false, we have nothing to fear, but much to learn. The same restless Truth and undeviating Power moves on, and we all have but to be faithful to our light and duty. In this view, it would seem this subject could be investigated with friendly regards to each, and with no ill feeling, or charges of deception and fraud, without proof. With these remarks I proceed.

Prof. Felt, Dr. Gould and others of their friends, from Cambridge, were invited by a gentleman, who, with his family, had frequently been present and manifested much interest in the Phenomena they had witnessed. He stated that friends at Cambridge felt an interest, and desired to see as he had; and with my permission should be pleased to extend the invitation. It was freely given, with the remark, that it was always a pleasure to have candid investigators present.

The occurrences of the sessions did not vary much from their statement, but a very different inference would be drawn if they could perceive the truth relative to them.

In Prof. Felt's introduction, he says—"We carefully abstained from doing anything which could interfere with the free course of the intelligences." That they no doubt intended; but there were many hindrances, which they, unfamiliar with the manifestations, did not understand. At first, it was a new circle, and required several sessions to become harmonious to the power, even under favorable circumstances; and, to all three of the sessions, new members were introduced. Then there was their prejudice and opposition, producing a positiveness of mind very unfavorable to the control.

And at the second and third sessions, they were full of excitement to impose upon the medium, by "pinching friction matches with mortal fingers." As stated by Dr. Gould, "there was evidently more than one actor, a considerable number of the lights were made by me without detection!" Will the reader believe that the medium was "producing the lights in a very natural way," and "not detect those made by Dr. Gould?" To most minds, I think it would be conclusive evidence of his innocence; and yet Prof. Felt writes, that it was believed by all, at the third session that the lights were produced in a very natural way," and "the experiment proved the truth." Can the reader see any truth proved, but that their matches made lights? Still more, he says—"as these lights can be accounted for by other causes," that is, matches, therefore, according to Dr. W.'s rule spirits could not do it—"the supposition of a preternatural cause cannot be admitted!" And why not? Can his "rule" arrest a natural law? And may there not be laws he does not understand?

The communication of "Ruby Swan Gould," was a remarkable test. The name was written by the hand of the medium, stating that she was the "wife of Gen. Jacob Gould, of Rochester, N. Y., President of the Mechanics Bank." All the items were true, but one, and that one related to time, which is unknown to spirit life; and Prof. Felt remarks, that "by a singular coincidence, one of the gentlemen present knew all about the bank." That gentleman came for the first time unexpected that evening; was not known, or even seen, by any one of us; and therefore the conditions could not have been arranged for him; and if he had not come, there would have been no point to the communication, as he was the only person by whom she could be recognised! I am convinced that the medium never knew she existed. But the Professor says—"he might have ascertained it; and therefore according to Dr. W.'s rule, the phenomenon of her alleged presence is no proof." But, it is proof to the medium and would be to the Professor, if it came in the same manner to him, or through some one in whom he had confidence.

At the third session, Dr. Gould states—"they came prepared for an exposure." The reader will look in vain in their letters for the first trace of an exposure! On extinguishing the gas on that evening, I left a door open, through which sufficient light was admitted to see the movement of any member in the circle, presuming it would better satisfy them, if they could see there was no attempt made to deceive in the production of the "lights"; but to my surprise they desired total darkness. I closed the door at their request. The Doctor and his friend, then commenced with lights on so grand a scale that they were instantly detected. They seized each other's hand, supposing it was the medium's. I at first exclaimed with surprise at their unusual number and size, presuming, till that moment, that all were candidly and honestly sitting to observe what might take place, independent of the act of any one present. This detection was the close of the session.

We felt and expressed our sense of the insult, for their attempted imposition. The implied terms of their invitation were set aside, and the conditions requisite for control destroyed; and we have reason to believe that the gentleman who extended to them the invitation, was ashamed to be connected with their proceedings, as neither he, or any of his family, attended, though expected, and, as they stated, had been advised by them of the time.

Here I will close, by referring to the following letters, and assuring the reader of my conviction, that the control was truthfully manifested by the medium, and that there was no movement made, or act done, intending to deceive them.

Boston, June 3, 1857.

LETTER TO DR. B. A. GOULD, JR.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 31st ult, relative to incidents at my house on Friday evening last, is received. On that occasion I was earnest and indignant, and so expressed myself; feeling that we were insulted, not only by you and "Mr. Norton's" attempted deception, but also by your peculiar remarks and manner and those of "Mr. Norton," during the sitting, relative to "seeing spirits" and "very interesting circle," &c., to Mrs. B. though their import was not apparent till its close. The perusal of your note, and reflection, but confirms that impression; modified from an intentional to an inconsiderate insult. Your firm convictions, as expressed in your note, that the whole manifestations were trickery and deception—its dupe, and Mr. Stiles and Mrs. B. the deceivers; led you to descend to that plane, and to treat us as if you were in a trickster's shop. You, therefore, was not in a fit condition to investigate. You came to conclusions from no proof, but from impressions, theories, and pre-conceived opinions; and your proceedings tended to destroy the conditions of control, as any one, conversant with its laws, will admit; and thereby rendered our sitting a farce. You may recall to memory that no raps were given on that evening, that we could distinctly decide to be such,—of which I spoke. Had your party desired a change in the circle of any members to enable you better to satisfy doubts, it would readily have been acceded to;—or Mr. Stiles, Mrs. B. and myself would have consented willingly to have been bound hand and foot, as our only desire was, that you all might be satisfied that the phenomena took place by a power independent of ours. As to your conclusions of its source, aside from the fact, we have nothing to do.

We are still as firmly convinced of spirit manifestations, and that they truly took place in your presence; in raps, writing and lights, excepting those produced from your party; not powerfully, as conditions were not favorable—not convincing—as your knowledge of our truthfulness, could not be to that extent. My opinion of Mr. Stiles is the same as before; I know him and his habits; the conditions and truthfulness of his control, by careful observation. It is also in harmony with that of others. Of Mrs. B. as she comes in necessarily as a sinner and abettor in the deception—I have only to say, that did you enjoy her acquaintance, no suspicion would rest upon your mind, as I am happy to state, if there is one thing which distinguishes her above all others, it is her ardent, devoted love of truth—and her unmitigated hatred of error and deception, in whatever form they may appear.

For your acknowledgment for my courtesy, kindness, and sincerity, you do me justice for that intent; and for your esteem and respect, I no doubt could reciprocate the favor by a longer or more intimate acquaintance, but to a man based upon eternal principles, firm in the integrity of his own soul, the opinions of men are of but small moment, whether high or low. And for all that is implied by not including Mrs. B. and Mr. Stiles receives our due opposition.

I, too, have been led to investigate the so-called phenomena of spirit intercourse; and fully concur with you in its vital importance to mankind, if true; not only from the general interest, now apparent, but by a natural proclivity, as an earnest lover of truth, as revealed through Nature's eternal and universal laws; but as it appears, fortunately or unfortunately, as it shall prove with an opposite result.

To me, spirit intercourse is not only a fact of experience,—with the candid exercise of my reason, as applied to daily life—but is philosophically true, as applied to the past history of man, in unfolding the only solution of those laws in which are wrapped the mysteries and miracles of past ages.

I concur with you that Truths are immortal; the thought of God, made manifest in Matter and Man; not only immortal, but imminent and Universal—like conditions producing like results. That being so, the question is, have the spirits of the departed ever appeared to or communicated with man? Admit they have, as is the general belief, you admit they may again, on philosophical principles. So much for my belief.

Relative to the detection of the "very acts" which produced the "raps and lights," I still sincerely believe that you deceive yourself. The raps occur with us without the presence of Mr. Stiles, and are very common; the "lights" are familiar to a large class of investigators, and with mediocrity occur when alone, as well as in circles. Had you caught the hand, as you say you might, you would have received my sincere thanks, as I desire fairness and truth, and loath deception; but it would have in no wise effected my faith in Spiritualism; as we have always regarded the "lights" as unsatisfactory; as tests, the believer does not require them, and the skeptic would give them no credence, as deception may so easily be practised in their manifestations. Mr. Stiles has always been reluctant to sit for them with strangers; but Mr. W. and yourself especially desired it, and he therefore consented. In justice to Mr. Stiles, I will here state, that Mr. W. and those invited by him, are indebted, not to Mr. Stiles, but to his friends, for being admitted to this investigation; it was only by their earnest solicitations, that he consented, as he is very sensitive to the doubt and distrust to which it leads; and I think he would have long since abandoned the pursuit, had he not otherwise been persuaded. Money, he has never asked, for sittings; his friends knowing his situation, have sustained him, with this exception: Mrs. W., after the first sitting, called upon the family, with whom he was stopping, to enquire into his antecedents, and to know candidly his situation, which was given;—and after that, they were kind enough usually to leave something for his support, which we supposed they explained to your party.

That you have, and can produce similar and more powerful manifestations by your own efforts, no one ever doubted or denied. Spirits, as we believe, can lift a table; no one doubts, but what you can arrange conditions to do the same. But we say they do it with no effort of ours; that you doubt and deny. It is unsupportable of proof, and there most rest; time will decide. Ezekiel was carried by the hair of his head, and Jesus walked on the water! Science demands the law; have you it? To say those were miracles, is evading the question. Science knows no miracle; she discards the term. May not the power be one and the same? and it not occur to you, that after having made a "number of lights" at the second sitting, "without detection," that it was strong proof of the honesty of the medium;—and so of the raps? He did not discover that they were made by you the last evening, and probably would not, if you had kept within bounds. It certainly seems to me good evidence that the others were produced without any of our aid. We were unsuspicious, readily acknowledging as true the deceptive "lights" and "raps" made by you; not dreaming of trickery or deception from your party! We, of course, knew you could, but should have repelled the idea.

You say, "we came prepared for an exposure." If you did, it did not take place. No exposure took place, but your own trickery and the complexity of your friends. You did not even state that you detected what you supposed to be deception; and even now bring no proof. Your charge is an unsubstantiated opinion—nothing more, to express myself plainly, as is my habit; and I beg to assure you I do it in no ill feeling. I must say that the exposure was, to you on the side unexpected, and it suggested itself as an after thought, to relieve yourself and friends from the inconsiderate treatment to say the least, we received at your hands. I do not say it is so, but it so appears; and for the following reasons:

1st. When the lights appeared on Friday evening, on asking if you were using anything, you made no reply. On again asking if you had phosphorus you said you had none. On demanding if you were using anything to produce what we witnessed, you stated that you had a match, as you thought you might wish to light a lamp. On further demanding an explanation of your action, you stated that you had made similar experiments at home, and wished to compare them here; which if you had stated on sitting down, would have been acceded to.

2d. You all well remember, that, after putting out the gas, and taking my seat, I remarked that it would be well to leave the door open—that the light from the window would be no objection to the manifestations, but it was your friends that desired it closed. Had it remained open, Mr. and Mrs. Felton could distinctly have seen Mr. Stiles' hands had he used them; and others could have detected you and your friend Norton.

3d. You will also call to mind, that I earnestly, emphatically, and repeatedly desired that all should be sure of his neighbor's hands. If there were doubts of Mrs. B. sitting side of the medium, she would have changed with any member. I truly believe every hand was faithfully held, but yours, Mr. Norton's and the lady sitting between you.

Our objection was not to the act, but to the manner. No confidence was given; no wish expressed for better facilities of investigation, by change of position, or otherwise, but you seemed to be surcharged with the idea, that Mrs. B. and Mr. Stiles were deceiving—and that without a particle of proof; and thus, being impenetrable to a more favorable impression, your minds projected their own hue, for the time, and we suffered the consequences.

You came as investigators, to see what might take place, and our desire was to render such aid as we could, having no wish to sustain anything but facts. We now regret that we had not more time, previous, or during the sittings, for mutual explanation, which might have resulted in a more happy termination. I could have better understood the tone of your minds, and so arranged conditions of investigation, as to have proved to you the incontestable fact of spirit communication.

Had you known me better, you would express no reluctance to disturb the repose of my faith. Repose is death to progress, and my faith is in truth; I am in any form or manifestation, and I am ever willing to re-examine, and to reject error, though its belief may have been cherished as my highest hope.

Truth will poise the world, however antagonistic; and false educational belief, however ancient; theories, however plausible, and institutions as mighty as the sons of men, must fall before it.

If Spiritualism proves true—as I am satisfied it is—in what exhibition is the conservative faith of the Schools to be held which have ridden the world as a night mare, for so many ages, and hindered the onward march of man's progress? Will it not then be perceived that they, like an infectious disease, have been permitted by God's righteous ordinance to sweep over and desolate the land?—or humanity?

In Spiritualism, there is no occasion for deception. Its manifestations are wide spread, and have become a "fixed fact" in the world's history; convincing to millions of sensible, clear-headed men and women, not filled with theories, creeds and superstitions; the class that God always demands, to carry forward the great progressive movements of the race. Its teachings are sublime, purifying and elevating—with a breadth of philosophy to embrace all laws, all wisdom, all men; past, present and future. On that plane stands the true Spiritualist. That it may be yours, to enjoy its expansive and progressive glories, is the ardent wish of

Very respectfully yours,

For the Patriot.

Professional difficulties—amicably settled

MR. EDITOR:—Among the current news of the day, we see it officially stated, that "Dr. Richard" unequivocally declines any public demonstration, in the manner suggested in the last number of your paper. He fully appreciates the motives of his friends, and feels grateful under the circumstances—but in consideration of the extreme elasticity of certain portions of his wardrobe, he is apprehensive that some serious accident might occur, which would mar his future usefulness.

In connection with the above gossip, the pleasing intelligence is likewise currently reported, that the late difficulties between the "Doctor," and a snarler in the profession, has been amicably settled. That the thread of their intercourse is not likely again to be interrupted, as a new seam has been taken in their friendship, and all past differences smoothed down with a hot iron.

A FRIEND TO GENIES.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, July 25th, 1857.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

MILITARY APPOINTMENT. We learn that David W. Wardrop of New Bedford, has been appointed and duly qualified Brigade Major and Inspector of the Second Brigade, M. V. M., which is under the command of Brig. Gen. E. W. Pierce.

This appointment gives universal satisfaction to military men in this section of the State, and the only objection ever raised against his former promotion to the office of Brigade Engineer, was on the part of his former associates in the New Bedford City Guards, who were greatly opposed to losing so valuable a member from the ranks of their company, where he was considered equal to the best; and Col. Thomas, of the regiment to which that Company belongs, did not hesitate to pronounce the then Sergeant Wardrop, the best soldier in the third regiment.

Major Wardrop, when a boy,—too young to carry a musket—served as a Marker for the New England Guards in Boston, from which he entered the Boston Light Guards, at its formation. Removing to New Bedford he became a member of the Guards of that city, in which he received the appointment of Sergeant, and served as such until promoted to Brigade Engineer, little more than one year since. The Major gives good evidence of the correctness of his early training under that nephus ultra of tacticians, Capt. John Kurtz of Boston.

A SOCIAL ASSEMBLY. We are pleased to observe by a card of Professor Walker in another column, that an exhibition, in behalf of his juvenile friends, who have been under his instruction for some time past, is to take place at the Town Hall, on Thursday evening next. We bespeak a good time for all concerned. For the pupils, in the generous and free-will offering, which has thus been made for their entertainment. For the parents and guardians a welcome treat, for the tender interest and kind regard which has been taken in their young proteges by their indulgent teacher, in developing those graces, and in the direction of their sylvan-like movements,—a feature so important in the finishing education of the young. And for the Professor, a numerous and happy company of approving friends,—with warm hearts and warmer sympathies.

BARBARISM. While rambling by our ancient and venerable Cemetery a short time since, we noticed with sorrow and sadness that many of the ornaments surrounding the front iron fence were wantonly broken off. This beautiful structure was erected at great cost by the worthy and commendable efforts of the ladies, in honor of the noble founders of the town and their descendants—it seems as if some course might be taken to prevent any further acts of such inhuman barbarism. Would it not be well enough for the town to offer a suitable reward as an inducement to have these vandals brought to condign punishment, and by so doing preserve these tributes of respect to our venerated fathers and mothers inviolate.

DEATHS AND INJURIES BY LIGHTNING from all parts of the country, (so says the Boston Herald,) are daily received. It has been an unusual afflictive season from this cause. Within the last fortnight a number of deaths, under the most painful circumstances have been recorded. Lightning is one of the secret and inscrutable agents of Nature. It is a valuable friend—a great purifier of the atmosphere—giving it a healthy and invigorating tone; but a bad master—going whithersoever it listeth and striking whatsoever and whomsoever it pleases.

A WELCOME VISITOR. We have the pleasure to announce that our old friend and fellow citizen, Capt. Ebenezer Underwood, is now visiting this, his native town, after an absence of eight years, during which time he has voyaged to California, Australia, and China. We were truly happy again to take this brave "Old Salt" by the hand—but more happy to learn from his friends, that he has met with success equal to any of his compeers.

"Who go down to the sea in ships."

May his hull long remain sound and seaworthy—and his sails spread and driven by a prosperous and profitable breeze, to the end of an aged, venerable and happy life.

NEW HOTEL. The Willard House, Western District, owned by Capt. J. A. Duggan, has been leased to Mr. I. H. Wiley, of this village. We learn that it is the landlord's intention to entertain both man and beast with the best "cheer" of a first rate suburban hotel—including bowling alleys, etc.

LONG JOHN WESTWORTH, as he is familiarly called, who has served an apprenticeship in almost every political party, and who has recently been elected Mayor of Chicago, (Ill.) had a fight in the Court House of that city, on Tuesday, of last week, with Charles S. Cameron, and on Friday was arrested for assault and battery.

A CLERGYMAN, living near Norva, (Ill.) recently beat his wife in a most brutal, outrageous manner, and would probably have killed her, had not the neighbors interfered. In what school have the clergy of Illinois received their education. For a man to beat a woman, much less his wife, deserves the execration of his species.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS. The season thus far is very promising. Copious showers, with life invigorating sunshine.—Every thing looks favorable; and the farmers have great cause for rejoicing, and to look forward to a rich and abundant harvest.

The Orthodox Society.

MR. EDITOR:—Had the member of the Committee, who published the report regarding the retrocession of the meeting-house and land which belonged to the Evangelical Congregational Society, given the reasons which compelled the society to adopt the course which they have taken, it would have saved many enquiries, and considerable mis-judgment in the matter.

The whole head and front of the controversy in the society, as well as the cause of closing, and subsequently retrocession of the meeting-house, arose from the unpopularity of their Pastor, and the conviction in the minds of a very large majority of the members and supporters of that church, that his usefulness as a Pastor had long since ceased. The dislike of the members to Rev. Mr. Clark had become so great, that means sufficient could not be raised to justify the society in continuing public worship in their meeting-house, and this suspension was accelerated by a circumstance which it may be proper to state.

When he accepted their invitation to become their Pastor, he contrived to get in a proviso "that his salary should be increased when their pecuniary ability should be such as to warrant it." This, he adds, will be perfectly safe to you and will be satisfactory to me, and now, in virtue of this proviso, he threatened to sue the society, unless they paid him an additional two hundred dollars per year; and all in the face of his own decreasing usefulness, and of the society's increasing debt.

'Tis true, that some three years' ago, at the instance of a number of friends—the writer among them—the society consented, though with great reluctance, to give him an increase for one year, but as they found that they continued going down hill, they had to fall back on the old salary; but this would not satisfy the gentleman, popular or not popular, useful or not useful, sink or swim, he must have the money, and because they refuse to pay what they consider an unjust, and an unchristian demand, he places an attachment upon their humble house of worship.

This, Mr. Editor, is Orthodox christianity, for you! But this is not all. This little society, in thinking matters over and contriving how to get out of its troubles, suddenly makes a terrible discovery. They find that the Pastor not only claims this increased salary, while he serves them, but whether he serves them or not. In short, he tells them that he is their Pastor, in perpetuum, their minister for life. But says the society, we made no such agreement. I don't care for your agreements, replies this reverend man of God! I am your spiritual master! your religious guide! and you are bound to pay me too, if you should sell the last shingle from off your meeting-house to do it! Verily, there are guides, who strain at gnats, and swallow mastodons. One is almost tempted to think that we worship under the shadow of the Vatican.

It has been reported abroad, that the minority embraces nearly all the supporters of the society. This is not true. The majority who now control the society, and those who sympathize with them, pay nearly seven-eighths of all the means that has been raised for that purpose. It has also been said, that Mr. Clark has made propositions to the society. This also is false. He has again and again refused to meet their committees or to confer with them in any way. He has all but insulted their members, and treated their communications with contempt. He stands, we are told, upon his legal rights, and is willing to sacrifice himself for a great principle, but what that principle is, he has not yet condescended to inform us.

It is well for the cause of religion, that there are but very few of its ministers who would be willing to assume such an unenviable position towards their people. The man who can attempt to brow-beat, and brave the determined aversion of two-thirds of his people—who vows he can live such opposition down—who can calmly and deliberately compass and work the ruin of a small society, over which he has been called to minister for their spiritual and everlasting welfare, and who rather than leave them to worship God in peace, will attempt to attach and sell the very sanctuary, built and improved by the charitable contributions of their friends and neighbors. Surely such a pastor brings disgrace upon the clerical office, and merits the condemnation and contempt of all christian men.

A MEMBER.

MILITARY. A correspondent of the North Bridgewater Gazette, in noticing the late regimental drill in this town, thus speaks of Col. Abner B. Packard:—

"During the two days' drill, Col. Packard commanded to the satisfaction of all. He showed himself well posted in the school of the battalion. He was highly complimented for the rapidity with which he followed up the movements, (nevertheless having them done correctly,) and for the care he displayed for those under his command. The evolutions of the line were generally done while the arms were stacked, which, considering the extreme heat of the weather, was very kind in him. One great fault in field officers, is tardiness. If there is any one thing that will cause troops to complain, it is standing in a line, under arms, awaiting orders. If field officers wish to be popular with their soldiers, they must keep them to work while they are under arms. Col. Packard has made a good beginning, and will undoubtedly prove an able and efficient and also a popular commander."

KANZAS. The difficulties in Kansas, arising from a disposition of a portion of the settlers to resist the territorial laws, in defiance of the General Government, will, we are sure, be brought to a peaceful issue, under the wise and skillful management of Governor Walker. It is a precedent not to be tolerated even for a moment. It is treasonable, and will find no sympathy with the people who will sustain their Government in supporting the supremacy of the laws, and the honor and integrity of its institutions.

THE MISSES TOWNSENDS. We had intended to have taken an earlier opportunity than this, to have paid our respects to the merits of this house in the preparation of their rich and highly flavored creams. But it is never too late to do a kind act, or discharge a pleasant duty. We therefore cheerfully add our testimony to that of others, from evidences made demonstrable, of the excellence of their creams and pastry, and of the real substantial comfort which may be taken in an half hour's visit, at this cool and fashionable resort,—corner of Hancock and Sea Streets.

CARPETS AT REDUCED PRICES. Many of our citizens are anticipating their wants and taking advantage of the low prices at which the New England Carpet Company of our city are selling off their immense stock at retail, preparatory to improving and remodeling their warehouse. They advertise Velvets, Tapestries, Brussels, Three-Plys, Kidderminsters, Ingrains, Commons, Oil Cloths, and their whole immense stock, comprising one of the largest in the country, at a great reduction from the usual prices.—Their warehouse is located at 75 Hanover Street.—Boston Post.

ERRATA. In the seventh line, six column on our first page, on the subject of Spiritualism, read appreciation, instead of opposition.

A MEMBER. The article of our correspondent we think requires some little qualification—we eschew all religious controversies.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

To the Memory of my Sister.

They tell me sister thou art dead,
That the cold waves roll o'er thy head,
That the dark blue waves of the ocean wide,
Roll o'er thy form and thy loved face hide.

They tell me that thou diedst afar,
In the land of flowers and art,
That there you breathed your last fond sigh,
From your friends and sister apart.

Shall we ne'er look on thy face again,
So full of mirth and glee?
Why did'st thou leave us sister dear,
To cross the world wide sea.

Dear sister, you were good and kind,
Gentle, and loved with a deep mind,
And God has called the brightest flower,
Which bloomed in this earthly bow.

Oh! stranger's hand closed thy dear eyes,
And composed thy limbs for their sleep;
And strangers laid you down to rest,
'Neath the waves of the ocean deep.

We weep for you, sister, we weep and mourn,
But 'tis useless to sigh or complain,
We know thou art gone to a happier home,
Where there's neither sorrow or pain.

But we'll weep no more, or sigh for thee,
For thou art happier far than we;
So sister dear sleep calmly on,
We'll weep no more that thou art gone.

And when the twilight shadows,
Droop o'er thee, glade and hill,
I'll dream of valley, my sister,
And whisper,—"Tis His will!"

KATE CARLTON.

The Giant.

BY CHARLES MCKAY.

There came a giant to my door,
A giant fierce and strong;
His step was heavy on the floor,
His arms were ten yards long.
He scowled and frowned; he shook the ground;
I trembled through and through—
At length, I looked him in the face
And cried: "Who cares for you?"

The mighty giant, as I spoke,
Grew pale, and thin, and small,
And through his body, as 'twere smoke,
I saw the sunshine fall.
His blood red eyes turned blue as skies,
He whispered soft and low,
"Is this?" I cried, with glowing pride,
"Is this the mighty foe?"

He sunk before my earnest face,
He vanished quite away,
And left no shadows on his place
Between me and the day.
Such giants come to strike us dumb—
But weak in every part,
They melt before the strong man's eyes,
And fly the true of heart.

Insisting.

A reasonable reason,
If good, is none the worse for repetition;
If bad, the best way 's certainly to cease on
And simply; you lose much by connession,
Whereas insisting in or out of season
Convinces all men, even a politician;
Or—what is just the same—it wears out,
So the end's gained, what signifies the route?

Anecdotes.

A Yankee, who employed a smart, intelligent Irish lad in gathering his fruit, sent him on one occasion with some strawberries to one of his customers; upon the lad delivering the fruit to the lady of the house, she inquired very politely if he was a brother to the gentleman that sent them. The lad informed her that he was not and hastened back to his employer; and feeling very much pleased with the lady's inquiry, could not help telling his Yankee boss about it, who, feeling a little provoked, made the following inquiry:
What in the duced did she think, that I was an Irishman.
In faith she didn't, reply Jimmy, but she took me to be a Yankee.

A lawyer once jeeringly asked a Quaker if he could tell the difference between also and likewise.
O, yes, said the Quaker, Erskine is a great lawyer; his talents are admired by almost every one. You are a lawyer also, but not like, vice.

Mr. said a little girl to her mother, do the men want to get married as much as the women do?
Pshaw, child, what are you talking about? Why, na, the women who come here are always talking about getting married—the men don't do so.

A gentleman being asked, how many days there were in a year? received the following reply:
It is impossible to number them, as every dog has his day!

A clergyman asked of his Scripture pupils whether the leopard could change his spots? To be sure, replied Billy, when he's got tired of one spot he goes to another.

Why don't you take a seat within the bar? asked one gentleman of another at the court-room.
For the best reason in the world, replied the other, my mother always told me to keep out of bad company.

Bathing.

The raps, you state, were seen to be produced by the immediate volition of persons in the circle, one of whom was the medium himself. The other one you refer to, I presume, is Mrs. B.

Now, if you saw aught, which led you, or others, to believe that raps were voluntarily produced by either of us, I can truly say, it was entirely unintentional on our part; as much so, as were the repeated drummings of your fingers on the table; and if you did see any such movement, it was nothing more than "the result of the nervous wishings," with which all, who are pregent to this influence, are familiar!

Your statements, in reference to the lights, are but mere assumptions, unsubstantiated by a single iota of proof. You say, that you distinctly heard me say something, and that directly a light flashed before you and your wife,—inferring that it was produced by my agency! This, also, takes the form of an opinion! If you heard such a thing, it must have proceeded from those parties, who were subsequently detected in the act of deception, and who, I have no doubt, will suffer the consequences of the "ungrateful return" for Mr. B.'s generous hospitality and kindness. If you thought that I, or any other member of the circle, was practicing deception, why did you not order a search to be instituted, that you might have satisfied yourself of the innocence of the parties you have attempted to arraign as guilty? If you had but asked for it, it most certainly would have been granted! Or, if you had desired any change in the circle, which would have given you a better opportunity to test the truthfulness of the Philosophy of Spiritual Communication, most cheerfully would we have acceded to it! But your sole object, as it appears to me, was not for an honest investigation, but to find fault, and to undermine, if possible, by the weapons of artifice and reproach, the enduring foundation upon which is based this Edifice of Eternal Truth!

You say, that, but for the accident, which led to the inquiry as to whether matches were present, other phenomena would have been exhibited more striking than any which Mr. B. has witnessed. Illuminated hands would have been seen moving through the air, inscriptions, in letters of living light, would have appeared on the walls of the room, while that note of warning uttered by an unseen hand for the benefit of B. B. B. B. "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin," would have been presented to the eyes of the medium, as a caution to him, if he was playing the part of a deceiver.

Now, I do not know whether these things would have happened or not; certainly, they could not, and have escaped detection. And I must think, that it was the intention of yourself and party not to have disclosed the nefarious parts you were playing and intending to play, as the undetected deception of Dr. Gould at the second session, and his evasive replies at the third, would forcibly demonstrate. And had the above inscription appeared on the walls of the room, written either through mortal or immortal instrumentality, it would have been no note of warning to me, but to those individuals who accepted the generous hospitality of Mr. B.'s family, enjoying the confidence and friendship of all its members, and who repaid them with such base and heartless ingratitude!

As to the "earthly perfumes" you refer to, I will say, that, from my youth up, I have been extravagantly fond of them; and their presence in a circle is no evidence of an attempt to deceive by their aid, as I have held hundreds of circles, where no such "earthly perfumes," as those you hint at, were present, as I can easily prove if I choose to do so.

Sir! I stand guiltless before my Maker of the charges you have preferred against me! I can say the same of Mrs. B! Did you better know us both, you would have paused, I think, before you dictated your unkind epistle! But my prayer is, that you may, sooner or later, see the truth in its proper light,—feeling that Truth alone will make you free; keeping, also, in faithful remembrance,

That, to acquire a Heaven above,
Where purest pleasures ever flow,
You first must seek, through words of love,
To plant the germs of Heaven below.

NEW PUBLIC BUILDING. The new building recently erected on Canal, near Hancock street, for the accommodation of the Hook and Ladder Company, is very neat, commodious, and every way adapted, we should think, for the purposes for which it was intended. It is centrally located, easy of access, and is not only a great convenience to the Fire Department, but an ornament to the town. In this instance, it is evident to our mind, that our municipal fathers have faithfully carried out the wishes of their constituents, and promptly responded to the wants of the Department. The first floor was occupied by a new and well-constructed carriage, manufactured by our friend Tirrell, bearing upon its ample shoulders, Ladders, Buckets and all other outwards necessary for any emergency. The painting and ornamenting, were by Messrs. Hall & Brown, and many of the devices, drawn from nature, were happy and truthful, reflecting much artistic skill.

Bathing.

Bathing and ablution dates its existence back to the remotest antiquity and is still held with great veneration, by some of the Eastern Churches, as a fundamental point of their religion. It was not, however, until the golden era of Rome, that it became a popular resort both for the robust and invalid. At this period, their celebrated aqueducts were completed at a great expense, being carried many miles through rocks and mountains; which bountifully supplied the city with water, and at this time baths began to assume an air of grandeur, and were visited by great concourses of people and their citizens. Here Rome's most noted poets read their celebrated poems,—and her orators discoursed in brilliant eloquence upon the various political topics of the day. The instruments then in use for the purpose of giving a healthy glow to the surface, after bathing, were very much like the modern curry-comb, composed of horn, brass, silver and gold. After bathing the Romans usually dressed for supper. They fell into discredit after the death of Marcellus, which was caused by the injudicious application of this remedy.

We shall now offer a few remarks upon the modern system of bathing, and I shall confine myself more particularly to salt-water baths, independent of hot, warm or chemical baths. The period of the year best adapted for sea-bathing is, of course, the summer and autumn, at which season, the temperature of the sea on our shores varies from fifty to seventy degrees. Immersion in the open sea may, however, be prolonged beyond the autumnal months, and even through the whole winter in rare cases. It would be improper to commence sea-bathing in the latter season, but many persons who have regularly used it in the summer and autumn may continue it through the severe season. Such recommendation presupposes the possession of a vigorous constitution. The time of day for bathing in the open sea must depend, in many places, on the state of the tide. A slight deviation may be allowed on this account, but the particular time best adapted must not always yield to mere convenience. The best time for using the bath is about noon; that is, two or three hours after breakfast. At this time we may presume that the system is sufficiently recruited by the assimilation of the morning meal, and we may further be enabled to ensure reaction by such previous exercise as may be deemed proper. In very hot and calm weather the sun is however, too powerful at noon for delicate persons more particularly on those shores which are sheltered by high cliffs. In these cases an earlier hour must be chosen, or bathing in the open sea must be given up.

When the constitution is vigorous, and the temperature of the surface is uniformly high, and when the person rises from his bed refreshed and active, the bath may be taken early in the morning. This is, in general, the best time for using the cold shower-bath; and the reason why it is found to suit better at this hour than the sea-bath, probably is, that the shower-bath is taken immediately on rising, while the surface still retains all the warmth of the bed. If one could plunge into the sea as easily, and before the surface is chilled by dressing, there is no doubt that the practice would suit very well with many, with whom it is found to disagree. In using exercise previously to the bath, with the view of rendering the circulation more vigorous, the individual must be careful not to induce fatigue or much perspiration. A slight moisture of the skin, (which, however, should be wiped off previously to entering the bath) forms no objection to its use, provided the surface still continues warm and the circulation vigorous; but if the body has been for some time losing its heat by copious perspiration, and the general powers of the system have been lowered by fatigue, the cold bath cannot be used without danger, however warm the surface still may be.

The mode of entering the bath, the length of time the person remains in it, and other particulars, must be regulated by circumstances. The bath should be entered suddenly, for the purpose of creating a quick reaction, and likewise, the necessity of leaving it while their still remains sufficient power of counter-reaction. From five to ten minutes may be said to be a medium period for staying in. Moving the body and limbs while in the water is highly advisable, and, of course, the exercise of swimming, if the individual possesses the requisite power and skill. The body should be speedily dried, and hastily, but well-rubbed with a somewhat coarse towel, and the clothes put on without any unnecessary delay. A common and other injurious error in the practice of sea-bathing is, that the individual remains so long in the water that the animal heat is lowered below the proper degree. This is a very common error, and we are convinced that great mischief is often produced in this way, when it is least expected; and especially is this the case with boys who enter the water several times a day. Parents ought to be more particular with their children on this point.

The cold bath is less applicable in infancy and old age than in youth and middle life. It is improper in persons affected with disease of the heart, and in great plethora, and in those who have naturally a thin and feeble heart, as is often the case in individuals of consumptive habits; also in most cutaneous diseases, particularly such as are apt, when suddenly removed, to be followed by internal affection; and in many other cases of general debility, and chronic inflammation.

ABLUCTION. This may be employed either as a general or local bath. Water thrown over the naked body from a vessel is a rude form of the shower-bath, and has similar effects. By a blution, the community understands the process of applying water to the surface by means of a sponge or towel. When general, it differs only from the shower bath in being attended by a less shock, and consequently a feeble reaction. It is much more frequently used as a partial bath, more particularly to the head and trunk of the body, in which form we consider it as one of the most valuable applications both medicinal and as a remedial agent. The daily ablution of the chest with cold water containing vinegar or salt in solution, is one of the most effective tonics in a numerous class of diseases, and the easiest and surest remedy of that almost general, and we fear, increasing disease, a proclivity to catch cold. This form of bath is always to be used, by the delicate, in the morning, immediately on getting up, while the body still retains all the warmth of the bed.

For the Patriot.

A House divided against itself cannot stand.

Our Evangelical Congregational friends, who have for years enjoyed Christian fellowship together in harmony, seem to be at present in an unenviable position,—some being for Paul and others for Apollos. One portion of the society worshipping at the Town Hall, under the preaching of their worthy and exemplary pastor,—while the other, assemble at the house of God, to listen to the Gospel as preached by itinerants. We are sorry to learn that human law has been called upon to settle this unhappy controversy, instead of the Divine; the last, we think, of the two, most applicable. We shall now offer a few brief reminiscences, (independent of bias or coarctation.)

This Society had its origin through the influence of a few individuals, who seceded from the Episcopal Church in this town. They, with some others from Boston, of the same religious views, formed themselves into what is called the "Evangelical Congregational Church. After a severe struggle for existence, they were enabled by the assistance of other churches of the same denomination, to erect a house for public worship.

The first minister was the Rev. Stephen Smith; he was a man of eminent piety, and worked assiduously for the welfare of the Church; they were supposed to be in a very flourishing condition, until he was notified they were not able to sustain him, and their connexion was dissolved. They then remained about a year without a pastor. After this, the Rev. Mr. Cornell received a call, and readily accepted the invitation; and was ordained to minister to their spiritual wants. He was the first settled minister, and labored hard to build up the Society for several years,—and then gave up by request of the Church. After him, the Rev. Mr. Allen was called to take charge of the parish, which he willingly did. On entering upon his duties, he found the Church in rather a backward condition. He commenced laboring hard for her welfare, and was encouraged in his course, by witnessing the flourishing condition of the Society; which continued until the last part of his ministrations, when a lukewarmness was experienced by the Church. This being the case, the connexion between the Pastor and the Church was mutually dissolved. He was a man of quiet and unassuming manners,—a deep reasoner, and a firm defender of the doctrines of which he professed,—and was universally beloved and respected. After him, the present pastor was settled,—whose labors of love among his flock are too well known to require comment. We hope the difficulties now existing will be amicably settled, for the benefit of the Church, the community, and the cause of Christianity.

THE WEEKLY PRESS. This is the title of a new Weekly paper, a Prospectus of which lies before us, to be issued on the 8th of August, in the city of Philadelphia, under the editorial management of John W. Forney, Esq. Mr. Forney is a bold and vigorous writer, and has long been associated with the Democratic press of the country.—His warm and ardent support of the administration of Mr. Pierce, while connected with the Washington Union, and his invaluable services in Pennsylvania during the late Presidential campaign, secured him the respect and confidence of his party. We wish him every success in his new undertaking, with hosts of cordial and sympathizing friends.

THE EXHIBITION. The Assembly on Thursday evening in the Town Hall, intended as a complimentary benefit by Prof. Walker to his pupils, was a happy affair. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, his young friends gathered round him in large numbers; and, by their happy countenances, spoke their gratitude for this new proof of their teacher's friendship and esteem. The grace and ease with which they

"Tript to the music of the merry dance," reflected much credit on their instructor, and it was with reluctance that they yielded their prerogative to their seniors, when the hour arrived, as has been previously arranged.

At eight o'clock, parents, brothers, sisters, and others of our citizens began to arrive, and the hall was soon filled with as happy an audience as we ever saw collected.

The dance was kept until near one o'clock, when the company separated with evident satisfaction, and with cordial feelings for their entertainer.

Prof. Walker we understand will commence another school early in the Fall. May his success be commensurate with merits.

Pic Nic. The Sons of Temperance will hold a grand Pic Nic at Island Grove, Abington, on Tuesday, August 4th. All friends of Temperance are invited to attend.

Eminent speakers have been engaged; among whom we notice the following:—Peter Sinclair, Esq., of Scotland, Wm. B. Spooner, Esq., Farmer Allen, Rev. E. Thompson, and Rev. S. Kelly.

Among the distinguished guests who have been invited, and who are expected to be present, are the Rev. Luther Rice of this town, Rev. J. W. Ward, Joseph Story, Esq., Samuel C. Knights of Cambridge, Hon. Henry Wilson, and many other.

A sufficient supply of refreshments may be attained at the Grove.

Fare from Quincy—including both ways—sixty cents. Cars will leave Boston at 9 A. M. and 2 45 P. M. Returning from the Grove at 5 28 and 6 15 P. M.

If the weather should prove favorable, we see no reason why a pleasant time may not be expected. The season is fine for such rural amusements—the trip delightful—and the arrangements bountiful.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY. On Tuesday afternoon of last week, a social gathering of the solid men of Quincy took place at the new Squantum House, kept by William R. Belzer, a distinguished and renowned caterer for connoisseurs in the creature comforts of life.

This was an anniversary after the toils and fatigues of a successful hay harvest. Among the "Lights of the age" present, we might notice ex-representatives, ex-selectmen, justices of the peace, constables, custom house officers—captains Massachusetts Volunteer Militia; known for services rendered to our whole country—together with several of the "Bone and muscle" of our town.

The luxuries of "the briny deep" and of "the sea-shore," were served in superabundance; and the tables weighed down with the rich things spread upon them.

The company were unanimous in their praise of Belzer; and returned home at an early hour, longing for the happy and instructive return of the festival.

PROFESSIONAL. Friend Ryerson has taken unto himself a new man. His business has increased very rapidly of late. No dark intervening cloud any longer overshadows his path. He has a clear and uninterrupted field of usefulness before him. From some cause, unexplained, Mr. R.'s professional compeers have deserted their post, and left him alone in his glory. It was a barberous act in these hot piping times; but blessed with a vigorous constitution, he feels quite equal to the task, and is sanguine, that with a little patience, a good deal of perseverance, and the kind indulgence of his friends, to be able to meet all the requirements of the community in his line, and present at the next fall election, as clean-faced a set of hard-shelled Democrats as can be found in the County of Norfolk.

THE SEASON still holds out a golden promise. Nature, however, in her maternal labors, has discharged rather too freely her sympathies to suit the convenience of those who did not take time by the fore-lock, and make hay while the sun shines. But on the whole, we never saw our farmers wear so cheerful a glow of animation, or look with a more confiding hope to the future. Every day but increases their faith of a rich autumnal harvest.

TO THOSE WHO UNDERSTAND. Hope you will all call and see "us," before your "fact" ship, or that remarkable musical talent of "whistling through the ears" departs on a "buzz."

CARPETS. The immense stock of Carpets belonging to the New England Carpet Company is now being sold off at reduced prices, at their warehouse, 75 Hanover street, preparatory to remodeling their sales rooms,—presenting a good opportunity for purchasers to supply themselves at low prices.—Boston Daily Herald.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT TO THE PUBLIC.—The last lump of the age; Cocoon, Cocoon Nut Oil; alias, Castor Oil and Cologne spirits, for preserving and beautifying the hair. Wigs annihilated, and the proprietors gone into insolvency. No bald heads admitted. Call on "Change," where the inventor can be found, and get a bottle. Only fifty cents.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 30th ult., Mrs. Mary C. wife of Mr. Edwin Farrington, and daughter of Mr. John M. Dexter, aged 18 years and 4 months.

Funeral on Sunday, after the afternoon services.

In Somerville, on the 25th ult., Mr. Francis J. Newcomb of this town, aged 31 years and 4 months.

Sad, sad was the fate of our dear young friend, Who was called to depart so soon; He has left us while in the morning of life, To moulder away in the tomb.

He was suddenly snatched from a fond wife's embrace;

And her heart is breaking with grief— Oh! is there no balm to heal that wound? No one to render relief?

Yes there is a balm that can heal that wound— A kind Physician is near— It is our dear Father above, Saying unto us,—Be of good cheer.

Ne'er shall I forget those melodious sounds,

Which so often flowed from his lips; But the thought that we never again shall hear, Those sounds, make me sad, and heart-sick.

But we trust our dear friend has now joined the choir,

Of saints and angels above: That his hands are employed in striking the lyre, And praising a God of Love.

He has now gone to try the joys of that world, To which we are all hastening fast; Then let us so live while here upon earth, That we may gain Heaven at last.

Again, I would say, mourn not stricken ones,

For soon, very soon, you will meet, Where husband and wife, parents and child, Will each other fondly greet.

Although that dear form is mouldering to dust,

And those lips are silent and cold, His spirit as soaring through regions of bliss, And where there are joys untold.

H. C. W.

In New York City, on the 25th ult., Ella Florence, only daughter of Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Charles L. Crane, aged 1 year, 6 months and 10 days.

Above the realms of death and sin,
Your cherub is at rest,
Mingling its accents with the songs
Of spirits of the blest.

On heaven's high battlements she stands,
A smile upon her face,
A young heiress to realms of bliss,
Designed for Adam's race.

Methinks I see her little hand
Beck'ning for you to come,
And looking for some favored spot,
For an eternal home.

Parents, when God invites you there,
Earth's cares and troubles o'er,
Your child shall welcome you to heaven,
And open wide the door.

invented.
This Machine will perform work equal to the commending itself to all Ladies as an indispensa-can afford to have one. Having had some experience with Sewing Machines of various kinds,

—one that will do your work well, would like to have you call and examine it, if you do not pur-

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Remembrance of a Brother.

BY LIZZIE R. TORREY.

When storm and night unfold the sky,
And heaven is dark above my head,
O! as there one unseen, yet nigh,
By whose fraternal hands I'm led?
When storm-tossed on Life's surging sea,
Do angel arms encircle me?

And does an angel form, me guide,
Through all these varied scenes below;
Forever walking at my side,
Present alike in joy or woe?

And may I e'er be blest to feel
His loving spirit round me steal?

Is there a star whose genial beams
Out-shooting from the spheres above,
Illumine my path with sunny gleams,
And fire my throbbing heart with love?
Is there a star that burns for me,
To lead me o'er Life's troubled sea?

Is there a voice whose mystic strain
Falls gently on my tranced ear,
Which wakes to life old joys again,
And bids still brighter ones appear?
When friends depart, and riches flee,
Is there a voice to comfort me?

O yes! I see, I feel, I know,
A brother's form is ever nigh;
I see it in the sunset's glow,
And in deep midnight's glittering sky.
I feel it in the balmy breeze
That moves in song among the trees!

Thou art the star that lights our way;
The arm that stays, the hand which guides.
The voice that charms our fears away,
As we pass o'er Life's changing tides.
And when death shall kindly set us free,
We'll walk the ever-blooming vales with thee.

"A Hundred Years to Come."

Where will be the birds that sing
A hundred years to come?
The flowers that now in beauty spring
A hundred years to come?
The rosy lip,
The lofty brow,
The heart that beats
So gaily now—
O! where will be love's beaming eye,
Joy's pleasant smiles and sorrow's sigh,
A hundred years to come?

Who'll press for gold this crowded street
A hundred years to come?
Who'll tread our church with willing feet
A hundred years to come?
Pale, trembling age,
And fiery youth,
And childhood, with
Its brow of truth,
The rich and poor, on land and sea,
Where will the mighty millions be
A hundred years to come?

We all within our graves shall sleep
A hundred years to come!
No living soul for us will weep
A hundred years to come!
But other men
Our lands will till,
And others then
Our streets will fill;
While other birds will sing as gay,
As bright the sunshine as to-day,
A hundred years to come!

Stanzi:

Look on me ever kindly
Oh never avert the eyes,
That to my heart tell only
Of joyous summer skies,
Oh speak not to me harshly
Say not one bitter word,
Thou canst not tell how quickly
Fountains of grief are stirred.

Anecdotes.

An old lady entirely out of the preacher's voice at a camp meeting, being found sobbing was asked why she wept, since she could not hear the words of the minister. O! said she, I can see the holy wag of his head.

A sailor, looking serious in a chapel, was asked by the clergyman if he felt any change? whereupon the tar put his hand in his pocket, and replied, that "he hadn't got a cent."

Come here, my little lad, said an attorney to a boy about nine years old. A case is between the people and the devil; which do you think will be most likely to gain the action?

I guess it will be a hard squeeze, said the boy; the people have the most money, but the devil has the most lawyers.

Neighbor Jones, said a rigid church member, I have been informed that you often drive your team, and even go fishing or hunting on the Sabbath?

I'm, replied Jones, but on these occasions I always whistle psalm tunes.

"This strange, muttered a young man as he staggered home from a supper party, how evil communications corrupt good manners. I've been surrounded by tumbler all the evening, and now I'm a tumbler myself."

A gentleman who has a very strong desire to be a funny man, sat down upon a hooped skirt, and with a desperation equal to any emergency, he whistled,—"I'm sitting on the 'style,' Mary."

I can't bear children, said Mrs. Prim, disdainfully.

Mrs. Pattington looked over her spectacles mildly before she replied—

"Perhaps if you could you would like them better."

Pure Potash

IN TIN CANS.

B. T. BABBITT,

68 & 70 Washington street, N. Y.,

and 38 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good lard. One other reason why Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and procuring the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soaps, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.

12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap

Directions for making hard soap.

Directions for Laundries and Hotels.

Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.

Directions for using this Potash in place of Sal Soda.

B. T. BABBITT'S

BEST SALERATUS.

IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked; thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first, (name and picture, twisted Loaf-bread, with a glass of water on the top, as you see in the bill.)

Full directions for making Bread with Sour Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry; also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Seidlitz Powders, will accompany each package.

Miscellaneous.

Proud Fred and Poor George.

In the little village of Rosten there once lived two boys, each thirteen years old, each attending Miss Brown's school, and both good scholars in the same class. They were not very good friends however, owing to something which has destroyed and prevented many friendships, and caused a great deal of strife and bitterness, but which has never been of the least service to manhood or boyhood.

Possibly you can guess what it was, when I tell you that Fred lived in a fine new, white house, with green blinds, while George's home was a shabby old tenement, with no blinds to the windows, and little glass, but an abundance of old hats, and other clothing, much more useful in excluding cold than admitting light. It is very probable you would guess that it was pride which prevented Fred from admitting George to his friendship, when we also tell you that he was a rich man's son, and so proud that he went by the name of "Proud Fred."

George was so unfortunate as to be not only a poor man's son, but the son of a man who loved rum, and spent all his earnings for it. You will not wonder that a rich man's son and a poor drunkard's boy were not very good friends.

And yet Fred might have looked much for a friend, and not found nearly as good a one. For poor George was a good boy, and gave promise of becoming a much better man than his father. He admired Fred, and used to render him many kindnesses, certainly well suited to gain his friendship, but Fred was much too proud and haughty to be thus won.

It happened, on one occasion, that Fred and George openly quarreled; and although every quarrel is a source of more or less unhappiness to the parties concerned in it, this one was to open a great fountain of sorrow in the hearts of these two boys. I will tell you how it occurred.

Fred, one day, having by chance attained the head of the spelling-class, was so much rejoiced at it, that, directly after school, he ran home and told his father. The latter, no less pleased, promised Fred, as a reward, a dollar for every day that he would retain his position. You may be sure that Fred tried hard enough, too hard perhaps; for the next day he missed an easy word, by spelling it in a most difficult manner, and putting in a great many unnecessary letters.

Then it was George's turn; and, pitying Fred, he tried to miss it, but didn't and the teacher told him to take his place at the head. George asked to remain where he was but Fred much too proud to keep his place by any such means as that, gave him a push, and went below. Then, after school, and within hearing of teacher and scholars, the proud boy called the poor one a drunkard's brat, and a ragamuffin.

Now, if George had never any parent but a drunkard, this might have made him angry enough to fight, which was what proud Fred desired. But he had a good mother at home, who was striving, against many discouragements, to make a good boy of him.

Being as sensitive as rich and proud boys are, and the taunt losing none of its bitterness because of its truth, he had occasionally, after being called such names, answered with a blow. But the weight of the blow always seemed to fall on his mother, for she generally heard of it; and each new evidence that her son was growing up a quarrelsome boy, and a fighter, struck her heavier and harder. And, as she was in the habit of receiving blows from her husband, George became quite determined that she should suffer no more from her son.

So, although stung by a sense of proud Fred's injustice and cruelty toward one who had not injured, but would gladly have served him, George buttoned his old jacket closely about him, as if to retain the wound and his anger safe within it, and set out for home.

But Fred would not let him off. Seizing him by the collar, he cried out to the boys who had gathered around:

"This is Joseph, the one that had a coat of many colors. See! there are eight kinds of cloth in his jacket; and, there's to be one more when his mother can steal a piece to cover his elbow."

The black insinuation against his mother's honesty—his mother, whom he loved as all boys should love their mothers, and honored with a respect which most other boys divide between two parents—sent a thrill through George's veins, which seemed to raise his arm even against his will, and dash it, with a strength exceeding his usual power, full in the irritating boy's face. The blow was so severe and sudden, that it quite took away the other's power to return it, until George was far out of his reach.

Now, some may call this but an expression of honest indignation; and, if the poor boy had not punished the slanderer of his mother after this manner, many would have accounted him lacking in proper spirit. If you care for my opinion, I will tell you what I think, the taunts and ridicule of an angry boy could not have injured George or his mother, if he had not resented them, any more than the ravings of a maniac; and that George would have gained more by conquering his temper,—more of a victory over Fred, I mean than he could possibly gain by violence, however successful.

I am quite sure that it is never right for one boy to strike another under any provocation, and always much better to suffer wrong than to do wrong. George, who is now a man, will tell you there has scarcely a day passed, since that one when he struck Proud Fred, that he has not deeply regretted the blow; and, although he has occasionally since felt that same thrill when insulted, he has taken good care to retain the control of his muscles.

Fred's father was a proud passionate man; and, when he heard his son's account of the affair, he resolved to be revenged, not only upon the offending boy, but upon his whole family. He had a mortgage on the house where they lived; and, owing to the poor drunkard's inability to cancel it, the property had been legally his for several months.

So, although it was in the depth of winter, he was cruel enough to take possession, and order the family out of the house, disregarding the poor woman's tears, and the entreaties of George that he would visit his anger on him alone. They were forced to take refuge in the poor-house; and, on account of exposure and trouble, the mother became sick and died.

The night after the funeral, George tied up in a small bundle his few patched clothes, a lock of his dead mother's hair, and a very little money, which in her last sickness, she had given to him. He put in, also a little Bible, from which she had taught him to prize above all books. When all was still, he quietly left the house, and was soon running rapidly across the fields. It was very cold, and dark, and still; but he was not afraid, for the gentle spirit of his mother seemed to bear him company. He traveled all night and many days, till at last he reached a great town of huge stone buildings, and tall stacks of chimneys. It was a town of factories. In one of them, without being press with questions, he gained employment.

Every day he thought:—Could my mother but be alive, how would her approving eye incite me to new diligence. Could she but have lived till I attained the station which, God prospering me, I shall surely reach, what pleasure it would give me to strew with flowers the path which was strewn with thorns so long.

Poor George was always prompt and diligent. God prospered him in his efforts; and he became, first the foreman, and afterwards a partner, in the great house which he entered, not many years before, a poor famished runaway.

And now comes the remarkable part of the story; so remarkable, that you may think it all fiction; and yet, it is only one of many instances, where great faults have borne their appropriate fruits, even in this life.

While George was seated in the counting-room one day last winter, an operative named Bags entered, and desired to speak with him with reference to a young man boarding at his house, who was out of employment, needy and destitute. Mr. Bags pitied him exceedingly, inasmuch as he appeared to have seen better days, apparently very good days, indeed. There had been a man named Peak, employed in some light work about the factory, who had recently left. It was Mr. Bags' purpose to enquire, if the unfortunate young man could be appointed to the Peak vacancy, providing he gave evidence of honesty and ability.

Ever willing to assist the needy, George, invited the benevolent Mr. Bags to introduce his portage that afternoon, promising to do something for him if possible. Soon after his return from dinner, Mr. Bags reappeared, unaccompanied, however, and with as much surprise depicted on his countenance as a set of features well adapted to that expression could be made to portray.

In reply to George's look of enquiry, he said:

"He came to the entry with me, sir; and, when I told him this was Mr. Trevett's room, he stopped suddenly, and asked,—"

"What is your employer's name?"

Trevett, I told him, George Trevett. Then he turned, and run down stairs, and I can't make anything out of it."

It was evidently some one who was ashamed to ask a favor of George Trevett.

Not many days after, the newspapers contained a melancholy account of a young man who had committed suicide in the prison where he was confined, while awaiting his trial on a charge of theft. Circumstances came out, which made it appear that he had been compelled to steal in order to procure the means of subsistence. It appeared, also, that it was Mr. Bags' lodger, whom Mr. Bags had not seen since his abrupt disappearance from the factory. It was Proud Fred.

Could he have accepted the situation which George would most willingly have tendered him, he would have been saved from a felon's name, and a worse than felon's death.

It will be well for every one to remember, that the poor boy of to-day may hereafter become a man of influence and station, able and willingly to assist a friend of his youth, who may be needy. If influenced by a higher motive, it is better in a selfish point of view, to love one another, and to be kind to all. In this free country, where the avenues to wealth and distinction are open to all, the poor boy with his hard hands often hews for himself a name and a position above that of the child of opulence. And in a long run, it is often seen that integrity and true character comprise the only wealth which will outlast the decay common to everything in this world. The foundations for these are best laid in childhood and youth.—Student and Schoolmate.

The First Saw-mill.

The old practice in making boards was to split up the logs with wedges; and, inconvenient as it was, it was no easy matter to persuade the world that the thing could be done in any better way. Saw-mills were first used in Europe in the fifteenth century; but so lately as 1555, an English Ambassador, having seen a saw-mill in France, tho't it a novelty which deserved a particular attention. It is amusing to see how the aversion to labor-saving machinery has always agitated England.

The first saw-mill was established by a Dutchman, in 1663; but the public outcry against the new-fangled machine was so violent, that the proprietor was forced to decamp with more expedition than did ever Dutchman before. The evil was thus kept out of England, for several years, or rather generations; but in 1768, an unlucky timber merchant, hoping that, after so long a time, the public would be less watchful of its interests, made a rash attempt to construct another mill. The guardians of the public welfare were on the alert, and a conscientious mob at once collected and pulled the mill to pieces.

Good Society.

It should be the aim of every young man to go into good society. We do not mean the rich, the proud and fashionable, but the society of the wise, the intelligent and good. Where you find men that know more than you do, and from whose conversation you can gain information, it is always safe to be found. It has broken down many a man by associating with low and vulgar—where the ribald song was inculcated—and the indecent story, to excite laughter, and influence the bad passions. Lord Clarendon has attributed success and happiness in life, to associating with persons more virtuous than himself.

If you wish to be wise and respected—if you desire happiness and not misery, we advise you to associate with the intelligent and the good. Strive for mental excellence and strict integrity, and you will never be found in the sinks of pollution, and on the benches of retailers and gamblers. Once habituate yourself to a virtuous course—once secure a love for good society, and no punishment would be greater than by accident to be obliged for a half a day to associate with the low and vulgar.

Our Statesmen.

In noticing the decease of William L. Marcy, the editor of the Vineyard Gazette appends the following comments:

It is rather a sad reflection, that the race of eminent public men of the period of Mr. Marcy are very fast disappearing from among us. That there were giants in those days, is now universally conceded. Crawford, Clay, Calhoun, Webster, John Q. Adams, Clayton, Marcy, Cass, and Benton, are names belonging to a very distinguished era of Congressional oratory and American statesmanship. The regret at seeing these men disappear is the greater, as no others seem coming forward to fill their places. Either the order of great men is rapidly terminating, or the manner in which politics is now conducted, does not tend to create them.

We look in vain either to State or National Legislatures, for the men of mark found in other times. High minded men are not encouraged in public life, and persons of fine talents and rich experience, are rudely set aside to make room for the demagogue and wooden nutmeg trader in politics. In order to keep in office, a man has continually to be turning political somersets, and watching the signs of the times, and negotiating with selfish, not to say unprincipled politicians.

There is no way of making great and virtuous public men, without encouraging independent thought and action. They must be sustained against demagogues clamorous for their places, and office seekers looking after profitable jobs. Because a man pipes for anti-slavery or other reform, a note or two higher than another, it does not prove him to have the cause so much nearer at heart. Be just to public men and be just to parties. Our present contemptible position in politics, is owing in a great measure to the cries of interested persons against our former political leaders and charges of party corruption. But what have we gained in listening to such complaints? Are public men and political parties any better now than before?

For the Patriot.

Spiritualism—Scandal, &c.

MR. EDITOR: In publishing the following letters, I wish to call attention to a prevailing characteristic, not only in this town, but as manifested by an apparent natural proclivity in the Professor—to slander. In his letter, the villainous charges and insinuations are moderately prominent for him, and he seems to be stimulated by slanderous informers or associates of this place!

As the suggester of these charges assumes a degree of respectability by his connection with Professor Felton, I here demand that he proclaim openly, what he has so freely whispered, and challenge him and all others, to substantiate the first impropriety committed by Mr. Stiles or any one with whom he associates. I trust Prof. Felton has too much honor to listen to a low and degraded slanderer, who would insinuate what he dare not speak, and like an assassin stab in the dark.

"To raise the devil, were an infant's task
To that of raising man. Why, every one
Conjures the fiend of hell into himself
When slander stirs and blinds him."

As long as these slanderous insinuations were confined to the associates of "bar-rooms," and the so-called "hopefully pious"—who I have observed, are especially gifted in that line—the more "pious," the more scandal and slander,—they were unworthy of notice. But as it has come up in this connection, I wish to place it upon record, for the candid consideration of the public; and as many individuals have had "free course" enough to be "glorified," in this direction, I would invite the "pious" teachers and all others to consider the inalienable rights of every individual to freedom of thought, belief, and action, so far as they do not trespass upon others; and then, if they desire to pray against the spread of spiritualism, they have the right; but name to interfere with the employment of others, because of their belief, or despoil with foul slander their good names.

"Once we thought that kings were holy,
Doing wrong by right divine;
That the Church was lord of conscience—
Arbiter of mine and thine;
That wretched priests commanded,
No one could reject or live;
And that all who differed from them,
It was error to forgive!"

Boston, July 2d, 1857.

PROFESSOR C. C. FELTON, Cambridge.
DEAR SIR: My attention was called to letters to a "Believer," published in the "Courier," originally addressed to myself; and considering it would better aid leaders to understand the subject, and elucidate the truth—our professed object and desire—you would have the kindness to request that paper to publish the replies to Dr. Gould and yourself.

Respectfully yours,

[COPY.]

Nahant, July, 5th, 1857.

DEAR SIR: I received your note just as I was leaving Cambridge for this place. I called on the editor of the Courier and stated your desire to him, telling him at the same time I had no personal objection to the publication of your letters. He said he could not spare room for them.

While I am writing, I cannot resist the temptation to beg you to re-consider the belief you have adopted in Spiritualism, and more especially, in Mr. Stiles. In your letter to me you made an ungenerous suggestion, that my suspicions of him grew out of a consciousness of my own character. I took no notice of it at the time, as the general tone of your letter was that of a gentleman. But I will now assure you that my suspicions of Mr. Stiles arose simply from what I saw of his conduct. And lately I have heard a striking confirmation of their justice, in the opinion of your neighbors in Quincy.

He has managed to blind and dupe you. You have warned a viper at your own hearth-stone, who will sting you; unless he sees you are "forewarned," and therefore, "forearmed." He has low cunning; not intellect, as you will find in your over confidence in the so-called manifestations of Spiritualism and in your medium, have subjected you to the control of a man, whom, in a sound and healthy state of opinion, you would not admit within your doors. You of course will not believe this: your neighbors do. Ask them, and if they give you a candid answer, they will tell you some opinions about Mr. Stiles which it much concerns you to know.

Very respectfully yours,

C. C. FELTON.

Boston, July 8th, 1857.

PROFESSOR C. C. FELTON, Cambridge

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 5th is received, and if deemed expedient, I shall avail myself of other journals to communicate to the public, in explanation of letters "to a believer," published in the "Courier" of 30th ult. I thank you for your expressed interest in my "belief," and accept, as an intended kindness to myself, the allusion to the character of Mr. Stiles; and here I would close, if the same base and unfounded charges were not uttered and circulated elsewhere.

I, therefore, must condemn the unwarrantable suspicion of him, as there is not the slightest ground for it. You were present with him three evenings; and, during that time, I am satisfied there was neither word or act by him intending to deceive. If you thought so, it in part arose by the involuntary agitation of the control: but I am constrained to believe it was mainly suggested by your doubts and suspicions; and your charges, from the evidence, I must say, are unworthy of any one possessed of true manly principles.

You must bear in mind, that it was our guests, and not the medium, who were detected in deception.

His character has no influence, and, in no way affects my faith, as that was settled antecedent to my acquaintance with him.

The suggestion, relative to the unfavorable opinion of my neighbors, has long since been considered with calmness and deliberation, and it does not influence me in the least, as I know him to be amiable, kind hearted, and pure minded; and it never has been my pleasure to associate with one, — his superior in those traits. I knew their estimate of him, which included all believers in Spiritualism, before I gave him my confidence; and having thus received him as a friend, that confidence will not be withdrawn without proof of his unworthiness. I also fully understand their vile remarks, which you think "it much concerns me to know." It becomes me not to ask,

"What will my neighbors say, if I Should this attempt, or that, or 'tother?
A neighbor is most sure a foe,
If he prove not a helping brother."

That man is brave who braves the world,
When o'er life's sea his bark he steereth;
Who keeps that guiding star in view—
A conscience clear, that never veereth."

The slanderous and malicious expressions and opinions of our neighbors have not the slightest cause or foundation, except our belief, that angels do communicate with mortals! That perhaps you have to learn, is the glorious tribute, ever paid to all reformers, by the ignorant and bigoted. Not the first impropriety can be sustained by truth against him; and this abuse arises solely from the unpopular belief with which he is identified. The low, the mean, the vulgar, the bigoted, those in place and power, and many habituated to depend on the authority of other minds, books, creeds and institutions, for thought and guidance, seem to be aroused to great excitement in the base elements of their nature,—to an intense hatred of believers in Spiritualism, and especially, of mediums.

Threats of personal injury have repeatedly been made, and jeers and insults have been of daily occurrence for years! But I am happy to say, that the opinions of neighbors or the public,—priest or Professor,—have but slight influence upon my thoughts or actions.

"The veriest coward upon earth
Is he who fears the world's opinion—
Who acts with reference to its will,
His conscience swayed by its dominion."

"Fear never sways a manly soul—
For honest hearts 'twas never intended:
They, only they, live cause to fear,
Whose matters have their God offended."

For years it has been my pleasure to be held as an infidel to the prevailing religion, and traitor to this slave-holding government, as administered; and the gibes of the sensual, the venom of the slanderer, the malice of the bigoted, and the falsehoods of the envious and hypocritical, who have swarmed in my path, have been to my soul as the incense of Angels, proclaiming, "Well done!"

The bubble, reputation, I have not been careful to preserve; but by faithfulness to my highest convictions, in an ardent and devoted love of Truth, Justice and Humanity have I ever wished to be guided, and exemplified by daily acts.

"Mind is not worth a feather's weight,
That must with other minds be measured;
Self must direct and self control,
And the account in Heaven be treated."

You thus see that insult and threats cannot arrest or retard this cause; and there is no power under God's heavens, that can arrest it, but a demonstration that it is an error and mistake, and a clear and scientific elucidation of another cause for the phenomena which are known and acknowledged to take place, under certain conditions. The denial of it by the "world" and the "rest of mankind," including your "Committee," has no more influence than a puff of wind.

I make these remarks, that you may have a sounder basis of judgment of Spiritualists and perceive more clearly why they accept Spiritualism—which is a simple fact of demonstration. What the spirits teach is another matter,—as it is evident you mistake the character of one, and do not appreciate the other.

It has been my good fortune to associate with those connected in this belief, who are harmonious to my own nature, and the views as here expressed. If you have come in contact with the vicious and degraded, I do not perceive that it is by any fault of Spiritualism, as vices belong to individuals, and not to facts or Nature's Laws.

Are truths of Christianity affected by the acts of its believers? Does the sensualism of its teachers change or alter the truths uttered by Jesus? If a professor takes the life of his friend, does it impair the scientific truths he may have discovered,—or should "Harvard" bear the blame of his villainous deeds? If not, why should the truths of Spiritualism be charged with the individual vices of its believers? If they are vicious or sensual, they were so, before they were convinced of spirit communication,—they having grown up, and been educated by the teachings, and in the light of the established institutions.

The question seems to me to be, are the manifestations a fact? If so, what are their causes? Settle these two points, and the errors and vices of believers in Spiritualism are amenable to the same laws as all other believers.

I have reason to believe that Spiritualists desire to maintain nothing but truth; and having sensible demonstration of a fact, and believing that to be true, they will maintain it, notwithstanding all possible opposition; as they as a class do not

"Crank the pregnant hinges of the knee
That thrift may follow fawning."

They believe that Spiritualism is a progress,—an unfolding of the Christian idea; that it is in perfect harmony with the truthful acts and teachings of Jesus; imparting an intelligent idea of its mysteries and miracles, and demonstrating Laws and Forces not understood or recognized in science or theology; and above all, decides the most important problem, which has struggled for solution in the aspirations of the ages, by the incontestable evidence of the soul's immortality.

"If a Man die, shall he live again?" is forever put to rest by Spiritualism.

If its opposers have any thing better to offer, it will be considered and accepted at its value; but to pretend that the teachings of the Sects of this day are better, is to insult the intelligent common sense of the age! If proof is desired that this is the general estimate, you have but to look at their condition and influence.

The remark in my letter to you,—
"That we estimate character by the development of our own," was laid down as an axiom, of universal application, and, therefore, not personal or ungenerous, though intended as my explanation of your universal distrust of all interested in this belief.

I have been induced to extend these remarks in consequence of articles published in the "Courier," which I think all candid minds connected with this philosophy must consider as unsound; displaying entire ignorance of the subject; exhibiting an unprecedented tyrannical bigotry, and clearly developing, in the most audacious manner, a total lack of an honest purpose in the discussion.

The eternal ages of God, are here."

"BORN TO MASTER, OR NO SECT ARE WE."

Riding.

Among the pleasant and agreeable amusements for this season of the year, we consider horse-back riding one of the most healthy and cheerful, especially to females.—What more gratifying to the eye, than a party of ladies and gentlemen enjoying this beautiful pastime, on one of our lovely New England twilights.

We propose, therefore, to offer a few remarks upon some of the rules and regulations by which this Art is governed, for the benefit of the uninitiated, as well as for the consideration of many self-taught amateurs. As there is no school in this town where such information may be obtained, we do not know that we can render them a better service.

First point for our consideration will be the subject of mounting: We pre-suppose that the lady is familiar with the proper costume, and understands how to approach the horse without further remarks. It is the duty of the gentleman, or whoever assists the rider to mount, to see that every thing about the horse is suitably adjusted: He then takes his position by the right side of the horse and commences in the following manner to assist her to mount: She places her left foot firmly in the right hand of the gentleman, and lays her left hand on his right shoulder, and the other, on the pommel of the saddle; keeping her foot firm and knee steady. If these directions are attended to, she will find herself raised to her saddle with but a trifling exertion. Having reached the saddle, while her face is still turned to the rear side of the horse, and before she places her knee over the pommel, when some ladies, very improperly, first take the reins, which ought to be done before mounting. The assistant puts the lady's foot into the stirrup, while she removes her hand from the near to the off crutch of the pommel. She now raises on the stirrup by the aid of the right hand, while the assistant, or the lady herself with the left hand, draws the habit forward in its place. She then places her right knee in the pommel and her seat is taken. The mode and manner of holding and using the reins, all are acquainted with without any suggestions.

One of the most common errors committed by ladies on horseback, who have not been properly taught to ride, is hanging by the crutch,—so that instead of being gracefully seated in the centre of the saddle, with the head in its proper position, the shoulders even, the body is inclined to the left, the head brought to the right by an inelegant bend of the neck, the right shoulder is elevated and the left depressed.

To correct or avoid these and similar faults are important. All the riders movements should harmonize with the paces of the animal; her position should be at once easy to herself, and to her horse. It sits in a careless, ungraceful manner, the action of the horse will be the reverse of elegant.

A lady seldom appears to greater advantage than when mounted on a fine horse, if her deportment be graceful, and her positions correspond with his paces and attitudes. She should rise and descend, advance and stop, with,—not after the animal. From this harmony of motion, results ease, elegance, and the most brilliant effect.

The stirrup is of very little use except to support the left foot and leg, and to assist the rider to rise in the trot; generally speaking, therefore, none of the weight of the body should be thrown upon the stirrup. In some of the schools a pupil is often directed to ride without the stirrup, and with her arms placed behind her, while the master holds the longe, and urges the horse to various degrees of speed, and in different directions, in order to settle her firmly and gracefully on the saddle. It is said, that when a lady, while her horse is going at a smart trot, can lean over on the right side, far enough to see the horse's shoe, she may be supposed to have established a correct seat, which we say, she should spare no pains to acquire.

After the pupil has become properly seated, she must commence walking the horse in a straight line, and at a slow rate, supporting his head in such a manner as to make him kept time in the beats of his paces. After walking in a straight line for a short time, the pupil should practice the turn to the right and left; after this, she must commence walking in a circle.

As soon as she is tolerably perfect in the walking lessons, she should begin to practise the trot. The whole exercises in circles should next be performed in a canter,—this is the most elegant and agreeable of all the paces, when properly performed by the horse and rider,—its perfection consists in its union and animation; rather than its speed.

Another important matter is to learn how to perform the perfect stop in all its paces; which must be done by practice.

Leaping is an exercise seldom engaged in, in this country, but, in Old England, it can be seen in its perfection, among the English ladies who join the jack-and pack.

"By capoe or dingle, heath or sheltering wood"
Are frequently taught to leap the bar.

Having now conducted our fair rider thro' its leading principles, it only remains for us to dismount her with grace and safety before closing this article. The first important point to attend to, in dismounting is the perfect disengagement of the clothes from the saddle, and before the lady quits it, she ought to bring her horse quietly to a stop. In order to acquire the mode of dismounting with grace and ease, more practice is required than merely descending from the saddle after an exercise or a ride. It is advisable to mount and dismount, for some days, several times successively, either before or after the ride, commencing with the most simple mode, until the pupil acquires sufficient confidence and experience to perform either of the operations in a proper manner.

We should like to have made many more remarks upon the beautiful exercise of horse-back riding but our limits will not admit. Hoping the few that have been offered will be of some use to the inexperienced, and beginner.

Chemical Facts

It has been somewhat a mystery to children and even grown people, why a hungry dog will make a meal on a bone, or how a number of them will consume a skeleton of an ox and thrive on the diet. It is not however, so much a mystery, when it is recollected that bones contain thirty-five parts in one hundred, of gelatin—and that gelatin is more nutritious than sugar. This fact known to dogs at the creation of the world, has taken chemistry about six thousand years to establish. Phosphorus is essential to the human organization, and as it is not found in gelatin, this alone is not sufficient to the organization. Every organ of our bodies, our flesh, blood, skin and bones, contains phosphorus. Is not this the principle in the human constitution from which the Spiritualists produce their so-called mysterious light?

Another essential element of our organization, is water,—of which we are mainly composed. Take for instance, the elegantly proportioned gentleman, weighing precisely one hundred and seventy-five pounds, avoirdupois, carries about with him, inside of his boots and doekskins, just about one hundred and thirty pounds of water, as careful as if it were fluid gold, or a casket of pearls. Were it not for the million of cells in which this fluid is held, our poor souls might drown in our own aqueous bodies. Even a great proportion of our food is nothing but water. If we buy a good lean steak from a fat beef, we think we have made some gain, but it is a fixed fact, that seventy-seven per cent. of the best round steak is only water. If we buy one hundred pounds of beef, for twenty-five dollars, eighteen dollars of our twenty-five, has gone for water. Think, O miser, of twenty-five cents a pound for water! It is vain to hope to escape by buying venison, mutton, fresh cod fish or pickerel. The result is the same,—nearly all water.—(the same as flows from ten thousand springs, or falls unasked on the evil and the good, who are alike ungrateful for the bounties of Providence.

POTATOES COMING DOWN. New potatoes sell in Cleveland for 20 cents per bushel; in Cincinnati, for 25; in New York for 60; in Boston for $2. The crop is likely to be abundant and the price low enough to take them out of the lists of luxuries, and place them once more in the daily rations of all classes.

BOSTON COMMON. It is stated that the Common in the City of Boston contains forty-eight acres: the iron fence, erected in 1836, at a cost of $100,000, is 5,392 feet in length, or 217 yards more than a mile. There are now about thirteen hundred trees, seven hundred of which are elms, chiefly American elms; there being only about fifty English elms. There are about eighty maples, chiefly of the white and silver leaf species. Of lindens there are about seventy. South-west of the large elm in the hollow are several specimens of the black aspens. The elms on the Tremont street mall were set out about 140 years ago; those on the Park street mall were set out in 1824.

In the State of South Carolina, the marriage laws are so stringent that not a single divorce, it is said, has even been granted.

Pic Nic. One of the largest and most magnificent Pic Nics, that has ever taken place among the suburbs, is announced to take place on Thursday next. It is to be composed of seven Sabbath Schools, with their pastors, parents, friends,—and, in fact, of all who would be happy to join in a glorious time, in that far-famed Grove, in Abington. The band that is engaged to accompany the party, has spoke more loudly and admirably on all previous occasions, by their lively and enchanting music, than we can find words to express it in. As to the other arrangements, we have no doubt that they are in like perfect order and excellent taste. For particulars see the Special Notice.

Justice's Court.

Justice Cowl before JAMES E. TIRRELL, Esq. July 31, 1857. Mary Buckley of Quincy, was convicted upon three complaints for selling spirituous liquors, and sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars, and costs of prosecution, and be imprisoned twenty days in the House of Correction; and also to recognize to the Commonwealth in the sum of one thousand dollars, not to violate the law again for the term of one year; and provided the "fine" and "costs" are not paid, then thirty days additional on each complaint, and was committed in pursuance of said sentence. John Quincy Adams, Esq., for the Commonwealth.

Aug. 1. Mary McCarty was convicted on two similar complaints and appealed. John Q. Adams, Esq. for Commonwealth, George White, Esq. for the defendant.

Aug. 4. Johanna Driscoll was convicted on four complaints and committed in pursuance of the sentence of said "Justice." E. F. Hall, Esq. for the Commonwealth, Geo. White, Esq. for the defendant.

Aug. 5. James Kelley of Quincy was convicted on three similar complaints and committed in pursuance of said sentence. E. F. Hall, Esq. for the Commonwealth.

William Holbrook was brought into Court upon a capias issued by said "Justice" for refusing to attend after having been duly summoned and considered guilty of a contempt and was ordered to pay a fine of three dollars, which he failed to comply with, and was committed to jail.

DOG DAYS. We are now in their very midst. This is not only the turning point in the farmer's calendar, which decides his future prospects, but it is the reign of the dog star "Sirius," one of our most brilliant constellations, which at this season of the year rises and sets with the sun. From this coincidence, which is about a month in duration, this period of the year has derived its name. The idea, therefore, entertained by some, that the peculiar position of this star in the heavens, has a direct influence upon the physical organization of the canine species is a traditionary error, long since exploded. It is true, that the diseases to which dogs are subject, are more prevalent in mid-summer than at other times,—still another reason must be sought for their origin. It is this prejudice that excites alarm in anything seen peculiar in their habits, and which is often magnified into something serious. This was the case in this town on Monday last. A strange dog (for nobody would own him) was seen in our streets, with strange looks, it is said, and stranger actions. A sufficient cause to give him a bad name,—and the cry of mad dog was at once raised. Poor Tray tried hard to throw off the foul imputation, by seeking some safe covert from the relentless persecution of his enemies, and where he might recover his lost reason; but it was of no avail; the verdict had gone forth—his fate was sealed. He was kennelled; and meekly yielded a life which had been forfeited by public opinion. We cannot be too careful, it is admitted, in such matters—but then, if this faithful friend of man, has, inadvertently, caught the madness of the hour, he is entitled to our sympathy, rather than the fate of the executioner. The wonder is, the example which has been set him by his superiors, instead of a single case, that the whole race has not before this run mad. Look at our police reports.

SHORT COMINGS. This is the most growing season within our recollection. A friend for whom we have done a small favor has grown entirely out of our remembrance.

CARPETS. The whole stock of the New England Carpet Company of our city is now being sold off at reduced prices, in consequence of improvements to be made in their sales rooms—presenting a rare opportunity for persons who are about re-decorating or furnishing their houses with Carpet, to do so at a great saving from the usual prices. Their elegant Velvets, Tapestries and Brussels, as well as the lower grades, are all advertised at about three-quarters the usual prices.—Their warehouse is located at 75 Hanover street.—Boston Bee.

EX-GOVERNORS. There are eight surviving Ex-Governors of New York, viz: Van Buren, Throop, Seward, Bouck, Hunt, Fisk, Seymour and Clark. Massachusetts has seven, viz: Lincoln, Everett, Morton, Briggs, Boutwell, Clifford and Washburn. Pennsylvania has but four: Ritner, Porter, Johnson and Bigler.

THE LAST LEAF IN THE BURDELL TRAGEDY.—Mrs. Cunningham, who figured so conspicuously in the Bond Street murder, New York, has, by a late attempt to perpetrate a bold and daring deception or fraud, in order to possess herself of the Burdell property, committed an error from which it is not likely she will be able to extricate herself. In order to effect this, the claim had to proceed from her personally; stratagem, therefore, could not be resorted to. Nature could not respond to her wishes,—art was to be her handmaid in her troubles. A false report was therefore put in circulation by her connivance, to the effect, that she was in the family way by the late Dr. Burdell. A physician was called in, and her case was stated to him. He believed her—sympathized with her, and agreed to see her through her troubles. She grew daily, and her fair developments gave good promise that the heir apparent would soon be forth-coming. But in the mean time, doubts and misgivings had taken possession of the mind of her medical adviser—he began to discredit her story, and signified as much to her, by requesting the liberty of satisfying himself. To this request she at first refused; but after a good deal of prevarication, she frankly admitted the fraud, soliciting his assistance to enable her to carry out her plans; agreeing to pay him one thousand dollars for his services.

This was an acknowledgment, even under the circumstances, which the Dr. was not prepared to receive. He staggered under it—hardly knowing what course to pursue. He concluded, however, to take counsel of the Attorney General, who advised him to carry out the deception, in the hope that the denouement would throw some light upon that mysterious affair. It was arranged, therefore, that Mrs. Cunningham should be made a mother, through the mediumship of a California widow, who had been indiscreet during her husband's absence: whose fatherless babe would present itself at a time to suit Madam C's convenience.—The preliminaries were strictly carried out—the denouement made, and the lady who would be a mother, was arrested for a crime that will subject her to ten years imprisonment in the States Prison, at least.

GOLD. The total export of gold from San Francisco for the first half of 1857, amounted to $23,742,589, showing an increase of $472,322 as compared with the first of 1856.

Its simplicity is another great recommendation. Only an hour's inspection will enable any one to keep it in perfect running order.

IT WILL PERFORM ALL KINDS OF FAMILY SEWING, From the thickest Woolen to the finest Linen, in a perfect and satisfactory manner.

These Machines are selling throughout the State, and in no instance have they failed to give good satisfaction. The manufacturers have not been able to supply the demand for them until late. The subscriber having now made arrangements to be supplied with them without delay, would be happy to furnish the Ladies of the town with them. The price is so low that every one can afford to have one. Having had some experience with Sewing Machines of various kinds, would recommend this Machine to be a good one,—one that will do your work well. Would like to have you call and examine it, if you do not purchase.

Tables, and all arrangements for running these Machines, with the foot, may be had if desired. Quincy July 18 1f

Poetry.

Mutual Forbearance.

The kindest and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear,
And something everyday they live,
To pry and perhaps forgive.
But if infirmities that fall
In common to the lot of all—
A bluish, or a sear impaired—
Are crimes so little to be spared,
Then farwell all that must create
The comfort of the wedded state;
Instead of harmony, 'tis joy,
And tumult, and intestine war.

The love that cheers life's latest stage,
Proof against sickness and old age,
Preserved by virtue from declension
Becomes not weary by attention;
But lives, when that exterior grace
Which first inspired the flame decays.
Tis gentle, delicate and kind,
To faults compassionate or blind,
And with sympathy endure
Those evils it would gladly cure;
But angry, coarse, and harsh expression,
Shows love to be a mere profession;
Proves that the heart is none of his,
Or soon expels him if it is.

Somebody.

Somebody's courting somebody,
Somewhere or other, to-night,
Somebody's whispering to somebody,
Somebody's clear unto somebody,
Under this last moonlight.

Near the bright river's flow,
Running so still and slow,
Talking so soft and low,
She sits with somebody.

Pacing the ocean's shore,
Edged by the foaming roar,
Words, never breathed before,
Sound sweet to somebody.

Under the maple-tree,
Deep though the shadow be,
Plain enough they can see—
Bright eyes has somebody.

Tip-toe to parlor door—
Two shadows on the floor—
Moonlight reveals no more—
Suey and somebody.

Two, sitting side by side,
Float with the ebbing tide.
"Thus, dearest, may we glide
Through life," says somebody.

Somewhere, somebody
Makes love to somebody,
To-night.

Haste Not—Rest Not.

Without haste without rest!
Blind the motto to the best!
Bear it with these as a spell;
Storm or sunshine, guard it well!
Heed not flowers that round thee bloom,
Bear it onward to the tomb!

Haste not—let no thoughtless deed
Mark for e'er the spirit's speed;
Ponder well and know the right,
Onward, then, with all thy might;
Haste not—years can ne'er atone
For one reckless action done!

Rest not! life is sweeping by,
Do and dare before you die;
Something mighty and sublime
Leaves behind to conquer time;
Glorious 'tis to live for aye
When these forms have passed away!

Haste not! rest not! calmly wait,
Meekly bear the storms of fate;
Duty be thy polar guide—
Do the right, whate'er betide!
Haste not—rest not—conduct past,
God shall crown thy work at last!

Anecdotes.

Col. Fuller with his usual urbanity, took a well known wit by the hand, and said: "Good morning, Mr. —, you are looking very well to-day, sir."

"The wit replied, I am not very well, Col. but I suppose you think I am, because I am looking Fuller in the face."

What is the matter, sir? said a druggist. Well, I have eaten some oysters, and I guess that is the trouble.

Have you eaten anything else? Well, no,—why yes I did, too—that is, I took for my tea a mince pie, four bottles of ale, and two glasses of gin, and I have eaten the oysters since, and I really believe the oysters wasn't good for me!

A fellow once pretending to have seen a ghost, was asked what the apparition said to him.

How should I know? he replied, I am not skilful in the dead languages.

Billy, how did you lose your finger? Easily enough, said Billy. I suppose so, but how?

I guess you'd lost your'n if it had been where mine was! That don't answer my question! Well, if you must know, said Billy, I had to cut it off, or else steal the trap.

An old lady in Pennsylvania had a great aversion to rye, and never could eat it in any form. But of late, said she, they have got to making it into whiskey, and I find that I can now and then, willy-nilly, take a little.

Dear me! what makes the cars stop here? Is there anything the matter? said a nervous lady, shaking with fear and disturbing a fast young man.

Yes, ma'am; a chaw of tobacco is lying right before the locomotive. As soon as it's removed we will be under way again.

A man being sympathized with, because of his wife running away, said "don't pity me till she comes back again."

A person who had become rather dissipated, was accused of having a loose character. I wish it was loose, said he, "I'd soon shake it off."

Miscellaneous.

[From Arthur's Home Magazine] The Counterfeit Dollar.

A richly dressed lady, followed by a servant, stopped at a market stall one day and bought a pair of chickens of a huckster woman. The lady offered a dollar bill, which the huckster changed. A fine looking, fashionably gentleman who was making some purchase at the same time, offered to oblige the huckster by taking the bill and giving five gold dollars for it. He gave her the gold, and she returned the just change.

The lady had not walked a step when she discovered that one of the gold dollars was counterfeit. She took it back to the huckster, who had just given her the gold, and she returned the just change.

She discovered that one of the gold dollars was counterfeit. She took it back to the huckster, who had just given her the gold, and she returned the just change.

Quite willing not to lose the dollar, she passed the counterfeit. A few days afterwards she passed the counterfeit again, and asked if the woman had yet seen the man who had given her the counterfeit the next time he passed, and make it back.

Lat, no, honey, was the reply. going to let you keep it, being as you my best customer; but I just passed the very first time I had to make change had no fuss! Never you mind my woman I give it to, served me the trick last week. I was very glad to chance to pay her off.

Fam very sorry it is going any said the lady. I came here on purpose and to destroy it. I thought I could afford to lose more money another. I shall always be sorry that I did not destroy it when I had it in my power.

Lady, then I wish I'd kept it, for I who I give it to, will likely pass it on poor body; and it does seem fair the big-bugs should lose what must be lost how. I will just see if Peg has got if you're willing to wait a bit.

No—Peg had not got it! She was scorned to keep it so long. But her victim with some discretion, money she called the big-bugs, she gave it to middle aged man, whose fingers would that he was less particular in examining his change than usual. Arrived at his found the dollar had but could not return at what stall he received it; so in indignation at the dishonesty of those sters, he had to make up his mind to his loss.

He went to church regularly—on Methodist meeting—but of all things, ed the poor plate which was passed for contribution every Sunday. Yet really put something into it, because eyes were upon him. The next Sunday when it of thought, bent o'er the open book, or joined her voice in the song; and when they met, the children looked fearfully at the vacant seat, where they had always seen that golden haired head bent in study, and they whispered softly to each other—she is dead. Reverent, though childish hands, turned the soiled leaves in her books, and glistening tears of sorrow dropped from the teacher's eyes, on their well worn covers. She was dead! There in the little entry was the nail where she always hung her tiny crimson hood and sack. But they were folded away now for she needed them no more; for she was clad in brighter garments and more glorious. Earth was not fit for such as she, and so God called her home; and she died. "My little cousin!" Little cousin! just finished the first cycle of her youthful existence of six years. So young to die!

NATIVE AMERICAN CONCERT.

The Chief Maungwudaus and his sons, Peewaush and Noodinokay, of the Chippeway Nation, natives of our boundless wilds, will give a Concert for the entertainment of their pale face European brothers, at the Town Hall, on Monday evening next. The Chief is a fine specimen of these simple untutored children of Nature. He has devoted years to his own education, for the purpose of educating the conditions of his tribe, and is now endeavoring to raise the means to finish the education of his sons, whom he intends for the Christian ministry. He speaks our language fluently, but prides himself on his Indian descent. On this occasion they will appear in their native costume—sing some of their national airs—their hunting, war and other songs, and in the course of the exhibition, give many of the characteristics and leading traits of character peculiar to the Indian. We have always admired the lofty and independent bearing of the Red Man his uncomparable love of freedom—and his pure unspotted nature; which has raised him high in the scale of humanity—as a part of the American family, and a faultless representative of the "model Republic." It is useless to attempt to trace his origin; that is wrapped in the mystery of ages. He must have sprung from a nobler and purer stock than any with which we are at present acquainted, or that history has furnished the account.—The appeal to our liberality on that evening, for a noble object, let it be generously met. The attractions certainly are novel and instructive, which we trust will be duly appreciated by our citizens, especially the Native Americans of modern growth—in order that they may compare cards. See their advertisement in another column.

THE PRESS. We have received the first number of Col. Forney's paper, and must say that our expectations have been fully realized. We expected much and have not been disappointed. The mechanical execution is admirably done; still, even here, time we think will suggest some improvements. The business department looks tariff; the advertising columns are well filled. An important item in newspaper publishing. His selections are judiciously made, adapted to the tastes of all classes of readers. His original articles bear the impress of deep thought, a thorough knowledge of his subject, and an honesty of purpose. highly essential qualifications for a public journalist.

In his address, Mr. Forney lays down the principles that will govern his future action; which, of course, are Democratic, and of the State Rights School.

What the Democracy of Pennsylvania lost by the rusee which defrauded Col. F. out of a seat in the Senate of the United States, will be made up by the valuable services which he will render the party in his new sphere of action.

The "Weekly Press," we can cheerfully recommend to our Democratic friends, who may be in want of a reliable organ of communication,—one that will never betray their confidence or desert their cause. Any service, therefore, which we can render individuals or clubs to obtain the paper, will be readily given.

REV. O. B. FROTHINGHAM, of Jersey city will preach in the Unitarian meeting house to-morrow.

HOT WEATHER. Yesterday was the hottest day of the season. Ninety-eight in the shade. This will do pretty well, considering that it was but a few weeks since the thermometer stood twenty-six below zero. Some of our good folks went to Abington to hunt up a fresh breeze, and others remained at home under their own vine and fig tree, in charge of the little ones. The pleasures of the day we think was divided equally between them.

CLAM CHOWDER. Don't forget Losings to day. The G. Saloon was never more inviting.

Set Saw—We sing the beauties of Law.

MR. EDITOR: In what an age of humbug we live. Of mountebanks and pretenders. Of quackery in every possible shape and form. From the pulpit to the bar. From the rostrum to the workshop. Scarcely a day passes but what something of the kind is got up to excite our wonder, or impose upon our credulity. We have been led to these remarks in consequence of an article which appeared in your last week's paper, under the caption of "Justice's Court."—(Heaven save the mark!) presided over by a youthful spig of the law, who claims a notoriety, as a pioneer in the great moral reforms of the age. Mr. Tirrell is committed to the Temperance cause. His life, fortune, and sacred honor will hereafter be devoted to its service. The Maine Liquor Law will find in him an able defender. And woe to the unlucky wight, who shall be found violating any of its sacred pledges. No stimulants, except those derived from a well-expected warrant, will in future receive his countenance. We feel grateful to the citizens of Weymouth for their timely consideration in our behalf, and trust that their young protege, who sacrificed home and friends for our good, will reap a reward commensurate with his merits.

We happened to be present at a trial one day last week, and was struck at the novelty of the scene. In the centre of the room stood an unpretending looking table which answered the double purpose of bar, bench and jury box. Around its ample folds, were seated his Hon., the Justice, and beside him, two legal practitioners, looking as solemn and grave as owls. A constable and deputy were also present, drawn thither no doubt by the scent of prey. The audience appeared to take the thing in good part, and were ripe for a rich joke. In a dark corner sat Mary Berkley,—pretty, naughty, Mary Berkley—who had sinned three times, (so said his Hon.,) without a single twinge of conscience,—with kerchief to her eyes, moistened with tears of contrition. But the majesty of the law knows no compassion—the justice was firm and unmovable. In opening the case his Hon. very clearly and lucidly stated the points at issue—selling, bartering, or furnishing in any manner, intoxicating liquors contrary to law, and then launched off into a speech of over five minutes duration, which for oratorical display, and brilliancy of effect, was never equalled upon that floor; electrifying his audience, and sealing the fate of poor Mary Berkley, to the tune of ten dollars fine, costs of prosecution, and twenty days in the House of Correction. The principal features of the Maine Law, he considered were perfect; and its workings beautiful, were its operations were not obstructed by a perverse and stiff-necked people. He thought it a perfect god-send to the destitute and needy of the legal profession, and it was for their interest to give it a warm and cordial support.

But to the point. The above is no fancy sketch. It may be seen almost every day in what is irreverently termed "Courts of Justice,"—rather, courts of inquiry, whose true and legitimate purposes have been perverted for the most base and sordid motives.

It is time the Working classes took the matter in hand; and clear the Augean stable of the filth which has been accumulating for ages. Protect their own ranks from all innovations upon their rights, by a heartless and corrupt aristocracy. There are too many drones in the hive. They are eating out their substance. The working bees should find them some useful employment by which they may gain an honest livelihood, or drive them from the hive. Such pettifoggers are the pests of society, embroiling its members in useless cases of litigation, for unholy gains. They poison every thing they touch. Instead of being elevated to places of honor and trust, they should be made to enter the more humble walks of life, where they would learn honesty, and some of the Christian virtues, at least. A community without lawyers, is the proper way to rid our jails of its inmates.

The idea that the middle classes are the only violators of the laws, and enemies of every wholesome regulation in our social system, is false. It is by their sweat and toil that the fabric is sustained. We have our infirmities, it is true; but we know them, and can provide for them; and stand in no need of political tinkers on the other side to prescribe for us.

Our wants are simple and few. We wish to enjoy unmolested a share of that prosperity which is mainly owing to our labors. To protect our domestic altars from the contaminating influences of those who are seeking our ruin; our females from being dragged from their homes, to be degraded to the lowest depths of infamy, for personal aggrandizement—and our dwellings from the midnight visitations of men of questionable moral character, seeking fresh victims for immolation. In a word—we wish to be let alone.

MISS SUSAN JOHNSON, of Medford, will speak in Johnson's Hall, to-morrow afternoon, commencing at 2 1/2 o'clock, and in the evening, at 6 o'clock.

N. B. Any person wishing to ask any question can have an opportunity.

Corn Oyster.

MR. EDITOR: As the season for green corn approaches I will take the liberty of presenting to your readers a method of preparing it, which renders it very nutritious and palatable. Those who understand and appreciate the good things which are so bountifully lavished upon us, and who are willing to take a little trouble, will, no doubt receive the information with gratitude. Men who have indolent and fashionable wives, will forego the pleasures of the appetite, but need not forego the luxury of the imagination.

Recipe. Take one pint of green corn grated; One egg well beaten; one tea-cup of flour; one half cup of butter; one table spoon of salt, struck measure, and one teaspoon full of pepper. Mix well, and drop a table-spoonful at a time into hot lard.

Poetry.

Myself and Polly Carter.

Bright is the tint of the Autumn leaf
When first the Fall frost nips it;
Smart is red pepper and cider mixed,
To the mouth that gentle sips it,
But brighter far than Autumn leaf,
Than cayenne pepper smarter,
Is the pride of my heart—my own true love—
My gentle Polly Carter.

I loved her when a little girl,
And loved her more when older,
And never once shall I forget
When first my love I told her,
She blushed, and sighed, and turned her head,
(Her eyes were filled with water,) I took her hand within my own
And whispered—Polly Carter!

She only blushed a deeper red,
And sweeter looked than ever,
My heart it seemed to run a race
With my old patent lever;
I told her that I loved her well,
And that I never would turner
For aught on earth, however prized,
The love of Polly Carter.

I told her that I had a farm—
Well tilled was every acre—
And that I had a snug farm house
To which I longed to take her;
And told her that unless she'd go,
For life I'd be a martyr
To Cupid's cause, and break my heart
For gentle Polly Carter.

She turned, and O! how sweet she smiled,
And said she loved me dearly;
Then what cared I for aught beside?
I was quite blest, or nearly;
The old folks said we might be wed,
And ne'er did I feel sadder
Than when the person made me one—
Myself and Polly Carter.

Happiness.

How happy is he born and taught
That serveth not another will;
Whose armor is honest thought,
And simple truth his utmost skill;

Whose passions not masters are,
Whose soul is still prepared for death,
United unto the worldly care
Of public fame, or private breath;

Who envies none that chance doth raise,
Or vice; who never understood
How deepest wounds are given by praise;
Nor rules of state, but rules of god;

Who hath his life from rumors freed,
Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
Whose state can never fallow feed,
Nor ruin make oppressors great;

Who God doth love and early pray,
More of his grace than gifts to lend;
And entertains the happiest day
With a religious book or friend;

This man is freed from servile bonds
Of hope to rise, or fear to fall;
Lord of himself, though not of lands;
And having nothing, yet hath all.

The Husband's Song.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Rainy and rough sets the day—
There's a heart beating for somebody;
I must be up and away—
Somebody's anxious for somebody.
Thrice has she been to the gate;
Thrice has she listened for somebody;
Midst the night, stormy and late,
Somebody's waiting for somebody.

There'll be a comforting fire,
There'll be a welcome for somebody;
One, in her nearest attire,
Will look to the table for somebody.
Though the star's fled from the west,
There is a star yet for somebody;
Lighting the home he loves best—
Warning the bosom of somebody.

There'll be a coat on the chair,
There'll be a slipper for somebody;
There'll be a wife's tender care—
Love's fond embracement for somebody;
There'll be the little one's charms—
Soon 'twill be wakened for somebody;
When I have both in my arms,
O, how blest will be somebody!

Anecdotes.

A Frenchman, who was exhibiting some relics and other curiosities, produced, among other things, a sword, which he assured his visitors was "de sword Balaam had when he would kill de ass."

A spectator remarked that Balaam had no sword, but only wished for one.

Very well, said de one he wished for.

A gentleman being rather hotly pressed in company to sing a song, pettishly observed that they wished to make a buff of him.

By no means, my good fellow, rejoined one of his tormentors, we only want to get a stave out of you.

What are you about, my dear? said a grandmother to a little boy who was sitting along the room and casting furtive glances to a gentleman who was paying a visit.

I am trying, grandma, to steal papa's hat out of the room without letting the gentleman see it, for papa wants him to think he's out.

What do you ask for this article? said Obadiah to a modest young miss in a shop.

Fifteen shillings, sir—it is a superb article. You are a little dear, are you not? said Obadiah.

Why, all the young men tell me so, she replied, dropping her eyes, and blushing.

Obadiah came straight away.

A lady of wealth put her daughter who had been pampered by indolence, under a governess. Upon calling to inquire how her daughter progressed with her studies, she was told,

Not very well.

Why, what is the reason?

She wants capacity.

Well, you know, I don't regard expense; you purchase one immediately.

Pure Potash

IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subsiding his name to every package, and warrants the strength to the effect of making soap, and other uses, the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say it did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.
Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect of making soap, and other uses, the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say it did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

For the Patriot.

Statistics, No. 1.

Although, from earliest boyhood, every American is familiar with the history of our country, its rapid rise in the rank of nations, its almost fabulous increase in population, yet few have any idea of the development of our resources compared with that of the most powerful European nations. And if our increase in population has exceeded that of other nations, our territory has been enlarged in an equal degree.

At the close of the Revolution our area did not exceed 220,680 square miles. The first acquisition of territory was made in 1803, commonly called the Louisiana territory, and consisted of 828,579 sq. miles. The second addition by purchase of Florida was made in 1819, and consisted of 66,100 square miles. In the years 1812 and 1816 the territory of Oregon was confirmed, amounting to 308,592 square miles; and in 1816, Texas was annexed, making an addition of 318,000 square miles. The last additions made by treaties with Mexico, amount in all to over 522,365 square miles. The total area of the United States January 1st, 1854, was, therefore, 2,536,166. Thus, in the space of 70 years, the territory of the United States, has been increased to more than three times its original extent, and now covers a territory larger in area than the mightiest nations of antiquity. Perhaps we can obtain a better idea of the extent of our country by comparing it with the area of some of the principal European nations.

Area of Russia in Europe	2,120,397
" Austria	257,368
" France	207,145
" Great Britain	121,912
" Prussia	107,221
" Spain	182,276
" Portugal	36,510
" Belgium	11,390
" Holland	12,601
" Denmark	22,533
" Europe	3,811,594

Thus, we see the territorial extent of this Republic is more than 24 times as large as Great Britain; nearly ten times as large as France and Great Britain combined; nearly three times as large as the whole of France, Great Britain, Austria, Prussia, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Holland and Denmark together; 11.2 times as large as Russia in Europe; and more than 23 as large as the whole of Europe.

Comparing the distance between some of our principal cities and the most noted cities of Europe, we may form a very correct opinion of the relative extent of our country.

American Cities. Foreign Cities.

Boston to Pittsburgh 616 miles.

Paris to Vienna 625 miles.

New York to Mobile 1476 miles.

Paris to St. Petersburg 1510 miles.

Philadelphia to Pensacola 1443 miles.

St. Petersburg to Constantinople 1450.

New York to Cleveland 671 miles.

Paris to Rome 709 miles.

New York to Astoria (by land) 3523 miles.

London to Isphahan (Persia) 3380 miles.

New York to Astoria (Panama) 6260 miles.

London to Delhi 5337 miles.

New York to Astoria (C.Horn) 17,500 miles.

London to Canton 18,000 miles.

Thus we see a person travelling from Boston to Pittsburgh would pass over about the same distance as that which separates Paris from Vienna, or, if he should travel from New York to Mobile he would pass over about the same distance as that which separates Paris from St. Petersburg. The distance from Philadelphia to Pensacola is about equal to that from St. Petersburg to Constantinople.

ple. If a person should travel from New York to Astoria by the land route he would pass over about the same distance as that which separates London from Isphahan, Persia, or, if he should go by the way of the Isthmus of Panama he would have to pass over a greater distance than that which separates London from Delhi, the seat of the insurrection in British East India, or, a voyage round Cape Horn would equal a voyage from London to Canton.

Comparing the area of the different states and territories together we find that the area of the territories exceed that of the states.

Area of States,	1,464,105
" Territories	1,472,061
" N. Slaveholding States,	612,597
" Slaveholding States,	851,508

The following table shows the population and the number of inhabitants to a square mile of various American and European countries.

	Population.	Sq. Mile
United States,	23,191,876	7.90
Canada,	1,842,365	5.31
Mexico,	7,661,919	7.37
Central America,	2,049,950	10.07
Brazil,	6,065,000	2.19
Peru,	2,106,492	3.63
Russia in Europe,	60,315,350	28.44
Austria,	36,514,466	141.88
France,	35,783,170	172.74
G. Britain and Ireland	27,475,271	225.19
Prussia,	16,331,187	151.32
Spain,	14,216,219	78.03
Belgium,	4,426,302	388.00
Holland,	3,267,638	259.31
Switzerland,	2,392,740	160.50
U. S. exclusive of Ter.	23,099,578	15.77
Territories,	92,298	.66
Free states,	13,434,922	21.29
Slaveholding states,	9,661,656	11.35
New England states,	2,738,116	41.94
Middle states,	6,024,988	57.70
Southern states,	3,052,837	15.27
Southwestern states,	3,241,117	7.00
Northwestern states,	6,379,923	16.13

The Middle States are therefore the densest portion of this country, and it is owing, probably, to the large cities existing there. The New England states are next in order, then the North West, then the South, then the South West. The states together have a density of sixteen to a square mile; the territories have only one inhabitant to every sixteen square miles. With the density of the Mississippi valley the United States would contain but 21,000,000 of inhabitants; with the density of the Southern states the number would be 45,000,000; with the density of New England, 123,000,000; with the density of the Middle states, 170,000,000; with the density of Sweden and Norway, the least thickly settled of any European states, would contain 45,000,000 of inhabitants; with that of Russia, over 80,000,000; with the density of Spain, 200,000,000; of France 500,000,000; that of Great Britain, 660,000,000; of Belgium, 1,150,000,000.

These few simple comparisons, which have been made, illustrate, in some degree, the immense extent of our country and the population which it is capable of containing. With this extent of territory, with a climate at all times healthy and invigorating, with a soil not excelled in the world, with mineral resources of every kind covering the whole length and breadth of the land, what but our own madness or folly can prevent us from becoming the most powerful nation that the earth ever saw. This land under that good Providence which has thus far guided us, is destined to be settled with a people free and intelligent, knowing no master save the Constitution and the Law, made by their own elected representatives.

Compare our country with the most enlightened nations of the world. France and England have been centuries unfolding their resources and they are developed to the fullest extent. Hardly seventy years have passed away and not only our resources are not developed; but scarcely known; yet we have risen to the first rank among nations. In the European countries we find a population crowded to satiety; a government in many instances burdened with the debt of ages, the mass of the people ignorant and degraded. Here we find a spare population, with a free government, free from debt, and an enlightened and intelligent population. They are in the full strength of manhood; we in a vigorous youth. History teaches their next step is downward, ours upward. And if in the first few steps of our progress in the dawn of our nation, we shine with such splendor, what must be the effulgence which will clothe the bright noon-day. So in the course of ages, if our population shall have increased, and our resources shall have been developed in the same degree, that distinguishes the most powerful European nations; and our territory increased in the same proportion as in the last seventy years, our population will be the population of the earth, and the territory, the world.

Therefore, for the hope of all those struggling to free themselves from the bonds of the oppressor, that the light of our example may shine upon, and sustain, and bless them, in their trials and dangers—for posterity demanding the same liberties we have received, it is our solemn duty, to do all in our power to strengthen the bonds that binds us together in one common brotherhood of states.

Kate Hasmer's Lesson.

OR THE PRIZE COMPOSITIONS.

Never! never will I speak to Kate Hasmer again! never so help me.

Hush! hush Fannie, do you know what you are saying? Do you know that you are breaking one of God's commandments, and perjurying yourself with an oath? and Alice Gregg looked sadly into the flushed face of Fannie Stetson, whose short and angry speech she had so suddenly stopped.

Fannie looked up into her face, but the flush died not away, or the angry gleam in her deep brown eyes, and from the clenched lips, a desperate—I don't care—escaped.

Fannie dear, and Alice's eyes grew dim with tears, don't you remember what you promised your dead mother.

O Miss Gregg! and Fannie's face was buried in the drapery of Alice's dress. She drew the slight form closer to her and let the child weep on. But the weeping soon ceased and dwindled away into a low sobbing sound, and then she drew the tear-stained face to her bosom, and asked why she was so angry with Kate Hasmer, and why she had spoken so rashly? O Miss Gregg! said Fannie, I was so angry that I didn't know what I said or did. I was sitting in my seat, after school, writing my composition, when, suddenly, some one turned a whole basin-full of water down my bare neck, and oh, I was so cold, and so angry, that I jumped up to see who it was; and there stood Kate with the empty basin in her hand.

Good enough for you, Miss Impudence, said she, good enough for you; you had no business to get above me, in the History class.

I didn't think I was so angry, and I spoke out, and said—You hateful old thing! And then she laughed, and before I could stop her, she caught my composition, that I had been trying to finish, and tore it in pieces. I rushed out of the school-house, and in— and you know the rest; and the curly head sank on Alice's shoulder again.

Poor Alice, you have been sorely tried, but did you remember your dear mother, and your promise to her?

No, no, I forgot every good and holy thing then; I forgot all my promises and good resolutions. Nothing but the old ugly feeling was in my heart.

Poor child, said Alice, but cannot you forgive Kate Hasmer now?

Oh! it's so hard, sighed Fannie, so hard.

Fannie! and Alice looked sadly upon her. Fannie have you forgotten your promise, you made your angel mother? Have you so soon forgotten the prayers which your mother has so often uttered over you? Go home, now, child. Go home; seek your closet and pray. Pray that you may subdue your sinful spirit. Let your prayer be unto Him, who dwells in the uttermost parts of the world. "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors for if we forgive men their trespasses, our Heavenly Father will also forgive us, but if we forgive not men their trespasses, neither will our Father who is in Heaven forgive us our trespasses;" and pressing a gentle kiss on Fannie's fair brow, Alice turned and entered the house, where she boarded.

Fannie, with a cloud on her brow, sadly entered the gate of her cottage home, which was near. As she walked up the broad gravelled pathway, leading to the door, a pleasant face peered out, and a kind voice said—Hurry Fannie, and then disappeared.

Fannie hastened quickly into the cottage, washed her face and hands, and sat down with the rest of the family to the tea-table. A blessing was uttered by her uncle, or the coarse but wholesome food, and then the happy family let loose their tongues and spirits.

What's the matter, Fannie, asked Charley Willis, her cousin. Nothing, nothing, she gasped forth, but the burning tears escaped and coursed down her crimson cheek.

Why you are crying, what is the matter? Hush, hush Charley, said his mother.

Fannie, she added, you can leave the table, if you wish.

Hastily pushing back her chair, without further ceremony, and with only her cape bonnet in her hand, Fannie ran swiftly down the village street, until she reached the little churchyard. Opening the heavy gate, she ran, sobbing, up the broad path, until she came to a green grave, apart from the others, under a large elm tree. Then flinging herself on the soft grass, she burst into a passion of tears, and there by her mother's grave, we will leave her for a short time.

Fannie Stetson was an orphan. Her father she had never seen, for he died in a foreign country, ere she was old enough to lip, even his name. Her mother, a true Christian, had sought to bring her up in the fear of the Lord, but when Fannie was twelve years old, her dearly loved mother was called to join her husband. Alice Gregg, who boarded there then, committed Fannie over her dying bed. She stood with Fannie until her father's face to the fatherless; begging her to give her heart early to her Maker, to control her passions, and, always do unto others as she would that others would do unto her; and sobbing bitterly all the while, Fannie promised everything she wished, and with a blessing upon her lips, her mother died, and Fannie's heart almost broke. Fannie then went to live with her uncle, whose family consisted of his wife, one son, and his wife's grandmother.

At the village school that Fannie attended, a prize was to be given to the writer of the best and neatest composition, and the chance of the prize, it was thought, would stand between Fannie Stetson and Kate Hasmer. To gain the prize, Fannie had been working diligently the past two weeks, and when the task was almost finished she had seen her composition, which would perhaps have brought her the prize, destroyed before her eyes. It was too much, and the long suppressed passions burst forth with renewed fury.

But let us return to Fannie, again. There she lay on the soft green grass, crying bitterly. Great choking sobs swelled her bosom and shook her slight frame.

Oh! mother, mother, she sobbed, why did you die and leave me all alone, and uncared for? Why, oh why did you die? Oh! that I should forget what you said to me about passion. Can and will God ever forgive me? Grant that the will bestow on me a better and humbler spirit, and when nine embers smite me on one cheek, may I turn to him the other also.

She finished her prayer, rose from her knees and wiped her tear-stained face with her handkerchief; and then weaving a wreath of wild flowers which were growing around her, she placed it on her mother's grave, and pressing her white lips on the cold marble stone, left the spot so dear to her.

When she entered the door-way of her home the family were at prayer. She stopped on the threshold of the door and listened. Her uncle was praying for her, and with a full heart she crept upstairs to bed, for she was chilled through by the night air and grief. While she slept her aunt bent over her and watched her deep but uneasy slumber, and tucking the bed clothes tightly around her, left her for the night.

The next day was examination day, and when the village clock struck nine, all the scholars were in their seats. Fannie was looking paler than usual, but otherwise looking very happy for the struggle between duty and inclination was over, and the victory gained.

Kate Hasmer sat next to Fannie! She was a proud, haughty girl of about fifteen. She possessed violent passions and strong impulses. Strong in her love, bitter in her hate. She met the glance of Fannie with a haughty stare, but a conscious blush of shame flushed her dark but handsome face.

Kate was leaning her head on her hand when she felt a light touch on her shoulder, and looking up she met the gentle glance of a mixture love and fear struggling in Fannie's eyes. For an instant she shrank back but her self-possession gradually returned, and she demanded in a loud but haughty voice, What she wished?

Wouldn't you like an orange, said Fannie. I have two, but cannot eat them both; and she held out to her a large luscious looking orange.

Kate looked surprised and then a cloud deepened on her broad brow, but in a moment more, without even a look, but turning away her head, Kate's hand closed over the orange, and there it lay untouched in one corner of her desk. A few moments afterwards a slip of white paper fluttered into Fannie's lap. On it were pencilled the following words,

I am sorry I tore your composition.

Kate.

At this moment the bell rang for the scholars to come to order, and rising the teacher spoke, and then the school began. Night was reproaching and the scholars were restless in their seats; but the exercises of the day were finished, and all the compositions read but two, and those were Fannie's and Kate's. The teacher took from the desk a composition, and called Kate Hasmer: Kate took her stand upon the platform and read loud and clearly her theme. The subject was an—Ode to the Storm!

It was truly a grand and lofty thing, and she read loud and distinctly; her dark eyes flushed with excitement, and the hot-blood rushed up into her face and crimsoned her dark cheek as she finished it. A burst of applause shook the school-house, and amidst it with a proud and conscious air of having done well she took her seat, but as she did so she caught a glance at Fannie's pale face, and a cloud settled on her brow.

It was so beautiful, whispered Fannie with a low sigh. Only see how it made me cry. But tears were in Kate's eyes as well as Fannie's and she would have said something in return, but at that moment the teacher spoke.

There is yet one more composition to be read, she said. Fannie, your composition. Fannie's face was dyed with blushes as she rose timidly in her seat, and a great choking sob swelled up in her white throat, as she essayed to speak; but she met the kind encouraging glance from Alice's deep blue eyes. (For Alice was among the spectators,) and then with a low but distinct voice, she said—

It is torn.

How was it torn? Yesterday it was almost finished, said the teacher, kindly.

If you please, said Fannie, I had rather not tell!

If you have any excuse speak and clear yourself of the disgrace of being neglected, if you have no excuse, take your act, said the teacher sternly.

Fannie's eyes were full of tears, and her bosom heaved wildly beneath the white muslin tunic, which was belted around her slender form; but she sat down and bent her golden head upon her desk and wept bitterly. She thought how unjust and cruel it all seemed, and, for a moment, she thought that Kate was very unkind not to tell why her composition was torn; and then her heart rebelled against Kate, but she soon banished her unkind thoughts towards her, and laid still, with her head upon the desk.

Kate looked at her sorrowfully and felt almost tempted to rise and tell all, but that demon, Pride—came, and the good impulses of her heart fled. Still she was sorry for Fannie, and felt bad to think she had torn her composition, and she was determined to ask Fannie, after the school was dismissed, to forgive her; for the good feeling of the heart, had been touched by the generous manner in which Fannie had shielded her from blame, and had taken it upon herself, when she was innocent.

If you please, Miss Harwood, said a pleasant voice, and Charley Willis stood upon the stand, with a folded paper in his hand—if you please, I will speak.

Certainly, said Miss Harwood, nodding pleasantly, certainly you may speak. All prepared to listen to what Charley might have to say, except Fannie—for he was a favorite with all—who still rested her head upon the desk. Charley after casting a conical glance at her from his roguish blue eyes began—

Last night after ten I thought I would study my History, and I went into the library for it, but it was missing. Now, think, I that book is at the school-house, and the next sensible thing I will do I must go after it, else to-morrow the committee will be sensible that I have not seen my history for some time. So I snatched my cap and ran down to the school-house. It was not in my desk and then I remembered that I had lent it to Kate Hasmer, and so I went to her desk to get it. It was in Kate's desk, and I was coming home, when I happened to look on Fannie's desk. The desk was covered with papers and Fannie's inkstand overturned on them. Now Fannie is always very neat, and I didn't know what to think of it; happening to look down upon the floor, I saw a nice white sheet of paper covered with fine writing. So I picked it up and found that it was Fannie's composition—her prize composition. Thanks I to myself, there's something wrong going on, and put the composition in my pocket and carried it home, intending to give it to Fannie in the morning. But when I rose this morning, Fannie was gone to school, and so I again put it in my pocket, intending to give it to her before school, but I forgot all about it until just now, when Fannie said her composition was torn, and although Fannie said it was torn, I can say it is not torn, and here it is; but before I end I will say that I think all isn't as it should be; and with a bounding step—and only were there, and she went smilingly towards the bed. There Fannie lay on her pillow, white, pale and wan. The rosy cheeks were gone and the round face was pale, sunken, and seized by the hand of disease. Her eyes were wide open looking Kate in the face and as Kate approached the bed she stretched out her hand and said, "Where are you? Why don't you speak to me?"

Here I am, dear Fannie, said Kate, softly bending over her, and from her eyes a drop fell and glistened on Fannie's hair.

I cannot see you, said Fannie, take hold of my hand. Ah! Is it you that is beside me? Then turning until she faced the old doctor, she asked with startling earnestness, "Am I blind?"

The large brown eyes were wide open all the while, but the last glimpse of intelligence was gone.

All the answer that the old doctor made, was to turn away, as he pressed down the staring eye balls with his hand, while a large lucid tear coursed down his own cheek, as he murmured, "Poor child! poor child!"

Then Fannie and all knew that she was blind. For a moment Fannie's heart sank, a sigh escaped her pale lips as she uttered in a low, sweet voice, the words, "Thy will, not mine, Oh, God, be done! Though the Lord slay me, yet will I trust in him!" She never saw again; but through all the rest of her life, she was cheerful and happy, and many lived who had cause to bless her name, for she was an angel of mercy, a sister of charity to the poor and needy. Kate Hamer and Fannie became firm friends, alike, both in storm and sunshine. Alice Gregg's kind words, sustained and cheered Fannie through every trial, and she lived in happiness and peace, having for her motto, through life, this text from the sacred Scriptures, "Even as ye would that others do unto you, so do you also unto them."

"BORN TO MASTER, OF NO SERVANTS."

DANCING SCHOOL. Mr. Walker, it will be seen by his advertisement, intends opening another school for the instruction of our young people in the graceful accomplishment of dancing. Mr. W. is too well known in this community as a teacher, to require any eulogy from our hands. His last sojourn among us was a pleasant one, and will long be remembered. We wish him a speedy return.

Pic Nic. Our adopted citizens, with many others, had a pleasant time at Abington, on Thursday last, notwithstanding the weather was such a threatening aspect in the morning. The company was quite large, full equal to the one on a former occasion,—and as the cars moved off with their human freight, we don't recollect ever seeing reflected so many joyous and happy countenances.

Lines

To Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd G. Horton, on the death of their children.

How changed is that home, once happy and gay!
How dreary and lonely become!
Its beauty and glory have all passed away,
Laid low, in the height of their bloom;

For the Angel of Death, with his poisoned darts,
Has fatally wounded those love-inspired hearts.

How often, O parents, in sorrow you've heaved,
The dread inspiring, and bow bringing calls,
Which grief's deepest fountains, within you have stirred;

And caused the sad tear-drops to fall!
O relentless and pitiless! why didst thou strike there,

And lay thy rude hand on the lovely and fair?

But mourn not, O parents! the loved ones departed;

Their beauty and virtue, and grace cannot die;
You shall find them again, when all the true-hearted

With joyfulness, meet, in the circles on high,
When Life's broken circles, are rounded again,
And hearts, are rebound, with Love's silken chain.

Beyond Life's horizon, in sphere more bright,
Than earth's fairest scenes, e'er presented to view;

You shall meet thy dear children, transfigured in light,
More radiant than flowers, robed in sunshine and dew.

O wait then in hope, till,—your pilgrimage o'er,—
You embrace them again, to be parted no more.

RIVER COTTAGE, CLAREMONT, N.H.
August 7th, 1857.

DEAR PATRIOT:—According to promise, and most agreeable inclination, I begin this to yourself. Imprints we are at home, and enjoying everything; are well, contented, and thrice happy.

We left Quincy as the clock struck one: it was a dark, stormy night, and formed an ugly contrast with the brilliant scene just closed; which still haunts our happy dreams, and which was one of the happiest evenings of the many gay and joyous ones, connected with pleasant profession.

The clock struck one, as I said, and it seemed the knell of "lots of happiness," the reverberation died away, the pattering rain struck up its monotonous music, varied only by gusts of wind, which served to make some passages "forte," others "piano." Good byes, and God speeds were exchanged, and our John cracked his whip and off we started. At first we began the usual after conversation, praised the scholars, their capital deportment; spoke of their fine dancing; wondered at the large attendance upon such a night; felt sorry the term was through; acquired how each had enjoyed the evening; spoke of the huge storm which pelted with intermission; said we were tired, worn out, sleepy, and finally, with the words upon our lips, we fell asleep.

Few people appreciate sleep, and never begin to think of any consequence until they lose a great amount; but let everybody keep dancing schools during the Spring and Summer months, have two exhibitions in a day, play, talk, prompt, praise, scold, manage and make yourself generally useful for seven mortal hours together, and when one A. M. arrives, it is my private opinion, that a small nap wouldn't hurt them, were it taken in a carriage, without bolsters.

Once more I was in the Town Hall, beautiful children danced gracefully; bright smiles made all hearts glad; gay voices chimed with merry music, and old and young participated in the dance. It was a happy sight, grey haired old men, as full of fun, life and frolic as their grand children. Mothers looking like their daughters. Fathers cutting pigeonholes, and children with smiling happy faces joining in the gay pleasures of the evening.

Who! who! back!! what yer 'bout, Hero? Who! we were at home, dark night, heavy rain, slippery pavements, and, I can say properly, that a change came o'er the spirit of my dreams.

Friday—battle and confusion. Saturday, started at seven-and-a-half for Claremont. It was a beautiful morning and followed by a glorious day. We arrived safely at one o'clock P. M.; found our friends all well and very happy to meet us, after almost a year's absence.

Claremont village is one of the most pleasant in the world. Sugar River, a sweet stream, runs through the town and carries many spindles, wheels, and all the et cetera of successful manufacturing establishments.

I was born here in "days long since," and christened Russell B., but abroad was always called Russ, and so have left off an "ell"; at home I am always Russell; but out of doors, Russ. Within a stone's throw stands the old building where I was taught my A B C.

Ah! me! what a host of memories start fresh into mind at the mention of that school-house. I almost pull up my trousers legs to look for marks, forgetting that a dozen years have passed since I was the plague of all good teachers. An old blacksmith shop used to stand beside it, and at recess we used to huddle round the door and wonder how they dared to stand amongst the red hot sparks. Even now I can see the dirty faces of the bellows boys; and I remember one hot horse-shoe I partly picked up. The faces of my schoolmates pass in review before me. Alas! where are they? There is hardly one left; and not one remains in the village. Many have died and are buried in our quiet churchyard; some have gone West, others South, but all are away.

In this very house I hemmed my first prayer; and, years ago when I left home, determined to follow my favorite pursuit, my dear mother placed her hand upon my head, and said—God bless you. Since, I have been North, South, East and West, and all ways in trying times, I hear the cheering words as mother spoke them—God bless you; and they will always be a consolation to me as long as life lasts.

Already I have taken too much of your valuable space and must hasten to a close: when once astride my "iron quill," I hardly know when to stop. My gentlest regards to friends, till there I hope to meet them soon. Good bye. Res.

Persian Bath Soap. As far as our experience goes, (and we have given it a fair trial) we can safely recommend it for all the purposes for which it is advertised. No person after once using it, would be without it. It is soft and molifying in its influence, and leaves the skin healthy and sound, without any unpleasant sensation.

For the Patriot.

Reply to "M."

MR. EDITOR:—One of the greatest pieces of absurdity and impudence, which it has ever been my pleasure to read, was contained in your paper of August 15th, over the signature of M. From the tone of the article I judge it to have been written either by some run soaker or dealer, who fears his resort will be the next one on the list of "closed."

One of his first assertions that "Mr. Tirrell is committed to the Temperance cause," that his "life, fortune, and sacred honor will hereafter be devoted to its service" is to say the least very sweeping, and partakes of the gassy, unreasoning, and shandorous style of the whole article. I have yet to know that Mr. T. enters the complaints himself, or is the means of others doing so. He is of course duty bound to adjust all such cases as may be brought before him, and I am happy to know we have one Justice among us who will give those their dues who peddle out the accursed stuff which causes three-fourths of the crime in our midst.

Surely it is better to be "committed" in the Temperance cause than to a habit of dram drinking or selling—a habit which has caused in years gone by and is now causing more suffering and misery in this place than many are aware of.

The name, "Courts of iniquity," which he sees fit to apply would better befit the resorts of his besotted friends, where are gathered the gambler, the thief, and the run soaked wretch, whose system is fired with liquid poison, and whose destitute family are dependent upon the "Temperance committed" for support. In fact, the most of the hard names which he applied to those engaged in clearing the town of low grogeries, would apply with perfect fitness to the very party he so stoutly endeavors to defend.

He speaks of learning "honesty and the Christian virtues;" pray, would he advise visiting the resorts of the rum drinker to learn them? it would seem so from his remarks.

The assertion that "a community without lawyers is the proper way to rid our jails of inmates," needs only the alteration of one word to become correct,—it should be rum instead of lawyers.

He goes on to say, "our wants are few and simple—we wish to enjoy unmolested a share of that prosperity, which is mainly owing to our labor—to protect our domestic altars from the contaminating influence of those who seek our ruin—our females from being dragged from their homes to be degraded to the lowest depths of infamy, &c." All of which, he gives to us understand, can be gratified by allowing the unrestricted sale of his favorite beverage—rum—surely a most wise reasoner. He must either have been degraded, or under "spiritual" influence when he penned his communication. ARGYLE.

Poetry.

To My Coat.

ONE OF BERANGER'S MOST FAMOUS SONGS.

Of course, it cannot be translated, but the present version is as good as any we have seen of it.

Though hardly worth one paltry groat,
Thou'rt dear to me, my poor old coat;
For full ten years my friend thou art—
For full ten years I've brushed thee clean;
And now, like me, thou'rt old and worn,
With both the glow of youth is gone;
Put, worn and shabby as thou art,
Thou and the poet shall not part,
Poor coat.

I've not forgot the birthday eve
When first I donned thy glossy sleeve,
When jovial friends, in mantling wine,
Drank joy and health to me and mine.
Our indulgence let some despise,
We're dear as ever in thy eyes;
And for their sakes, old as thou art,
Thou and the poet shall not part,
Poor coat.

One evening, I remember yet,
I roving, feigned to fly Lisette;
She strove her lover to retain,
And thy frail skirt was rent in twain.
Dear girl, she did her best endeavor,
And patched thee up as well as e'er.
For her sweet sake, old as thou art,
Thou and the poet shall not part,
Poor coat.

Never, my coat, hast thou been found
Bending thy shoulders to the ground
From any upstart "Lord" or "Grace"
To beg a pension or a place.
Wild forest flowers—no Monarch's dote—
Adorn thy modest button-hole;
If but for that, old as thou art,
Thou and the poet shall not part,
Poor coat.

Poor though we be, my good old friend,
No gold shall bribe our backs to bend;
Honest amid temptations past,
We will be honest to the last;
For more I prize thy virtuous rage
Than all the lace a courtier brings;
And while I live and have a heart,
Thou and the poet shall not part,
My coat.

Grumbling.

BY J. H. NAUGHTON.

What a world of complaint!
It would frighten a saint
To hear all the muttering, grumbling and growling.

One prays for fair weather
One for rain, one for—nothing;
Come rain, or sun, there's sure to come howling.

The miller is wroth
At the sun and the drought,
For his pond wouldn't cover a dimer;
But soon he complains of rain,
That the spring or full rains
Has sent his old dam—down the river!

Next comes the mechanic
All pining with pain—
He can't raise steam, his schemes are all wasted.

But in two or three days
We hear he did raise
All the steam that he wanted—his boiler has burst!

The farmer next mutters—
Their wives make no better—
The hay has all rotted, and Jake broke the rake;
But oh! Spirit of Evil!
Now comes the weevil—
God help the poor farmer, ere his heart break!

And thus comes the howling,
And grumbling, and growling—
Tis too hot or too cold, too dry or too wet!
But I think if we go on
With grumbling and so on,
We deserve a place hotter than I've seen it yet!

Humility.

The loaded bee, the lowest flies;
The richest pearl, the deepest lies;
The stick the most repented,
Deth how the most its modest lies;
Thus deep Humility find,
The mark of every master mind;
The highest gifted, lowliest bond,
A most meek and humble sound,
And shuns the fame that fools adore,
That puff that bids the feather soar.

Anecdotes.

An old lady from the country had a dandy to dine with her on a certain occasion. For the desert there was an enormous apple-pie. La, ma'am, said the gentleman, how do you manage to handle such a pie?

Easy enough, was the quick reply, we make the crust in a wheelbarrow, wheel it under an apple tree, and shake the fruit down into it.

A teacher asked a bright little girl, what country is opposite to us on the globe? Don't know sir, was the answer. Well, now, pursued the teacher, if I were to bore a hole through the earth, and you were to go in at this end, where would you come out?

Out of the other end, sir! replied the pupil with an air of triumph.

A merchant was reproving the keeper of a low grocery for his disreputable mode of getting a living.

I get my living as respectably as you do, said the rum-seller. Don't you live by your bargains?

Yes, so do I by my bar-gains!

A lady talking over Mrs. Oakes Smith's lecture, and its advocacy of woman voting, said—

La! what's the use? Is there any woman worth trusting with a vote, who cannot make two men, at least, vote as she likes?

Pure Potash

IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, for nearly total loss. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap, it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle. It has five workable virtues of the best Potash, amounting in the aggregate to over 22 feet. This makes 22,000 tons of coal under each acre. This will make the land of inestimable value.

In considering the advantages of emigrating to this locality the following are presented:
First—The soil is a rich limestone, capable of raising heavy crops, owing to which this settlement has attained its present great prosperity.
Second—It is the centre of the great North West Coal Basin, and is destined to become one of the greatest business places in the State. It will supply the great Lake market, (according to population and travel the greatest in the Union.) It has five workable veins of the best Bituminous Coal, amounting in the aggregate to over 22 feet. This makes 22,000 tons of coal under each acre. This will make the land of inestimable value.

There are already good turnpike Roads running through this country, various other roads have been opened to accommodate the emigration and settlement which has already taken place.

There are no opportunity equal to it now offered to the man who wants to provide himself a home in an easy way, and make a settlement where he can live in prosperity and independence in a climate PERFECTLY HEALTHY.

No case of the fever ever having been known to occur in this settlement. It is not like going to the backwoods of the West, among perhaps intolerant people, where there is no society, churches, or schools, where the price of land is high, and where the emigrant, after being used to the most healthy climate in the world, has to endure sickness and pain, and perhaps ruin his health and that of his family. But here is a thriving settlement having three towns, containing churches, schools, hotels, stores, saw mills, grist mills, and everything desired. There is a cash market at hand. The lumber trade last year amounted to over two hundred million feet of lumber. In a short time, owing to the coal, it will be still more valuable, as a number of the works of the manufacturer have been started extensively at Warren. Even for those who do not wish to go there, the payments are such that they can easily buy a farm to save their rising families from want in the future, or to gain a competency by the rise which will take place in the value of land. By an outlay scarcely missed, a substantial provision can be made.

Persons should make early application. Apply or write to E. J. Jellies, Secretary, No. 135 Walnut Street, below Fifth, Philadelphia. Letters carefully answered giving full information.

Stakes or tracts of land can be bought or secured by letter enclosing the required sum of five dollars, when the subscriber will be furnished with books, maps, &c. Warrantee Deeds given. Persons can also purchase from our Agents.

Route from Philadelphia to Tyrone on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, and thence by Stage to the land. This is the best and most comfortable route. The best hotel accommodation is afforded. Enquire for E. C. Schultz, Esq., the Agent for the property at St. Mary's.

Hall's Great SCROFULAR REMEDY.

THIS Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant and agreeable to the taste, and simple in its action, causing neither vomiting or purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease, regulates the Bowels, removes all vitiated secretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that feeling of Languor which is often experienced in the Spring and Summer, and renovates and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.

In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofulous Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Tumors, Elicers, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Inflammatory Rheumatism, Fever, Scurvy, White Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Bacher's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eczema or Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.

It is also an efficient cure for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Costiveness and Derangement of the Urinary Organs.

It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and other diseases peculiar to Females, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart, Dizziness and Headache.

It can be given with perfect safety and most desirable results in all cases, to any person from infancy to old age.

SEWING MACHINE
THE Ladies, and others interested, are respectfully invited to call at the Room over D. B. Stetson's Store,
JOHNSON'S BUILDING,
For the purpose of examining the little Family
Sewing Machine, which as regards
Price, neatness, simplicity, and durability, is far superior to any Machine that has ever been invented.
This Machine will perform work equal to the best One Hundred Dollar Machine, thereby recommending itself to all Ladies as an indispensable acquisition to the work-table. Its simplicity is another great recommendation. Only an hour's inspection will enable any one to keep it in perfect running order.
IT WILL PERFORM ALL KINDS OF FAMILY SEWING,
From the thickest Woolen to the finest Linen, in a perfect and satisfactory manner.
These Machines are selling throughout the State, and in no instance have they failed to give good satisfaction. The manufacturers have not been able to supply the demand for them until of late. The subscriber having now made arrangements to be supplied with them without delay, would be happy to furnish the Ladies of this town with them. The price is so low that every one can afford to have one. Having had some experience with Sewing Machines of various kinds, would recommend this Machine to be a good one,
—one that will do your work well. Would like

MEDICATED INHALATION
FOR the treatment and speedy cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma,
Catarrh and all Chronic Diseases of the Throat and Lungs,
AT THE Boston Lung Institute
No. 69 1-2 Summer st.
MEDICATED INHALATION WILL cure Consumption. Why? Because the remedy is applied directly to the seat of the disease. The medicine being prepared in the form of vapor, is conveyed in the air we breathe, to the most minute air cells in the lungs. Its chemical composition possesses the power of dissolving and rendering easily expectorated, the secretion in the air-cells, and by being brought directly upon the disease, establishes a new condition of the mucous membrane, immediately relieving the lungs from the matter collected there, and the vapor being composed of healing gums and balsams, the weak air cells are stimulated and strengthened, the ulcers and cavities heal, and the patient rapidly passes from a state of disease to health.
Proofs of its wondrous efficacy will be given on calling at the BOSTON LUNG INSTITUTE,
No. 69 1-2 Summer street.
Consumers who apply personally may confidently rely that their disease will be detected with unerring certainty, and treated with a success hitherto unknown.
Persons residing at a distance, and unable to visit the Institute, by sending a medical description of the case in writing, can have suitable remedies with full direction sent them.

Poetry.

[By request.]

Does the Blood of Christ Cleanse Us from All Sin—

Must I now believe it, "That Christ died to save me,
From the horrors of hell and the reprobate's doom?"
That alone is enough, in this life, to deprave me;
Then what can I hope beyond the dark tomb?

If God cannot save my poor soul from perdition,
Without such a ransom of innocent blood,
Though I pour out an ocean of tears of contrition,
It would not appease the hot wrath of your God.

Should I follow His teachings and holy example,
Through all my earth-life, to the verge of the grave,
And tread in His footsteps, and make Him my sample,
Still naught but His blood is sufficient to save.

How can I believe such a monstrous delusion,
With total depravity stamped on my soul?
No wonder the world is so sunk in confusion,
Where no God of mercy can help or control.

I cannot believe that a God of such terror,
Has ever created this beautiful world,
And doomed all his children for Adam's one error,
To endless perdition at last to be hurled.

And then give his Son to be tortured by dying,
To save a few ruffians and others from woe;
For none can be pardoned except by applying,
The blood of the Innocent, ages ago.

Although he may murder and rob his own brother,
And revel in riches for many long years,
And then by applying the blood of another,
His sins are forgiven, he dies without fears.

Oh horrid blasphemy! no man can believe it
Who has not a heart that is harder than stone;
No Angel in glory can ever receive it;
God claims all the children of earth as his own.

FRIEND OF HUMANITY.

For the Patriot.

Hat Lost!

The why I could ne'er understand,—
But I never could find an Old Bach,
That was not aye tramping the land
To see who or what, he might catch.
Each one is as selfish as old,—
As asly as a Gipsy-bred brat;—
And one was, this morning, so bold,
As to tramp with my very best hat.

Unsuspecting, as honest folks are,
At leisure my breakfast I took,
Nor dreamt, till I shov'd back my chair,
That a scamp my best beaver might hook.
But no one the beaver could find.
And my blood boil'd with rage, as I sat
Revolving vast plans in my mind
For getting on track of my hat.

He's a rascal! I cried in a rage,
Who laid thievish hands on my thatch.
He's a knave—and a copper I'll wage,
He is what is still worse,—an Old Bach.
Compell'd then to don my old straw,
My pride a sad tumble-down got;
And I vow'd that our Big MAN OF LAW
Should convict him of hooking my hat.

He has pilfer'd my very best tie!—
And find it adds to my hate
That, in fancy, I see the rogue smile
To think how he's bother'd my pate.
Yet forgive him I will, if he'll own
That Age makes him blind as a bat;
And will leave it to conscience alone
To lash him for hooking my hat. Zeb.

Anecdotes.

You charge a dollar for killing a calf, you smutty rascal, said a planter to an old negro. No, no, Massa, replied the gentleman from Africa, charge fifty cents for killum calf, and fifty cents for the how-how.

See here, my friend, you are drunk! Drunk! to be sure I am, and have been for the last three years. You see my brother and I are on the temperance mission. He lectures, while I set a frightful example!

Is your powder good? asked a sportsman of a dueler. Good! indeed it is. A cask of it got on fire the other day, and before I could get a pail of water, it was half burnt up.

John, said a father to his son, on the day he was twenty-one, you have got a fool for your master now. Yes, said John, and have had these twenty years.

A pedagogue told one of his scholars, a son of the Emerald Isle, to spell hostility. H-o-r-s-e, horse, commenced Pat—Not horse-tility, said the teacher, but hostility. Sure, replied Pat, an' didn't ye tell me the other day, not to say hoss? Be jabbers it's won thing wid ye won day, an' another the mixt.

A gentleman thought he'd like something painted in the hall of a new house, and chose the Israelites passing over the Red Sea. He engaged a man for the job, who went to work and painted the hall red. "Nice color," said he, "but where are the Israelites?" "Oh, they're passed over."

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and as good as any other Potash made. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Laundering and Hotels.
Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Soda.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.

To Those Who Want Farms.

A FARM WITHIN THE REACH OF EVERY MAN.

THE Ridgway Farm Company has made arrangements by which all who desire to settle or purchase a home can do so. The Farms consist of the best limestone soil of the most superior quality for farming, in a rapidly improving place, into which an extensive emigration is now pouring. The property is located in Elk County, Pennsylvania, in the midst of a thriving population of some 10,000. The climate is perfectly healthy, and the terrible plague of the west fever is unknown. It also has an abundance of the best quality of Coal and Iron. The price to buy it out is from $3 to $20 per acre, payable by instalments, to be located at the time of purchasing, or a share of 25 acres entitling to locate the same for $300, payable $6 per month or 12 1/2 acres payable $4 per month. Discount for every sum of $100 and over, paid in advance, a discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed, and for over $100 a discount of 10 per cent.

In considering the advantages of emigrating to this locality the following are presented:—
FIRST—The soil is a rich limestone, capable of raising heavy crops, owing to which this settlement has attained its present great prosperity.

SECOND—It is the centre of the great North West Coal Basin, and is destined to become one of the greatest business places in the State. It will supply the great Lake market, (according to population and travel the greatest in the Union.) It has five workable veins of the best Bituminous Coal, amounting in the aggregate to over 22 feet, which makes 22,000 tons of coal under each acre. This will make the land of inestimable value.

The eminent state geologist, Dr. Charles T. Jackson of Boston, has made a geological survey of the land, analyzed the coal, the iron ore and the limestone. This report together with maps will be furnished to inquirers.

FOURTH—Three railroads are laid out thro' this property. The Sunbury and Erie Railroad gives us a market for our coal to the lakes—it runs from Erie to Philadelphia. A large part of this road has been finished, and is now in running order. A heavy force is now working from Erie towards our land in the western direction, the means for the completion of which has been raised—it will soon be finished. The Allegheny Valley Railroad connects us with New York, Boston and Pittsburgh. The Venango Road connects us with the West.

There are already good turnpike Roads running through this property, various other roads have been opened to accommodate the emigration and settlement which has already taken place.

There are no opportunity equal to it now offered to the man who wants to provide himself a home in an easy way, and make a settlement where he can live in prosperity and independence in a climate PERFECTLY HEALTHY.

No case of the fever ever having been known to occur in this settlement. It is not like going to the backwoods of the West, among perhaps intolerant people, where there is no society, churches, or schools, where the price of land is high, and where the emigrant, after being used to the most healthy climate in the world, has to endure sickness and pain, and perhaps ruins his health and that of his family. But here is a thriving settlement having three towns, containing churches, schools, hotels, stores, saw mills, grist mills, and everything desired. There is a cash market at hand. The lumber trade last year amounted to over two hundred million feet of lumber. In a short time, owing to the coal, it will become still more valuable, as a number of iron works and manufactories will soon be started extensively at Warren. Even for those who do not wish to go there, the payments are such that they can easily buy a farm to save their rising families from want in the future, or to share the benefit of the rise which will take place in the value of lands. By an outlay scarcely missed, a substantial provision can be made.

Persons should make early application. Apply or write to E. Jeffries, Secretary, No. 135 Walnut Street, below Fifth, Philadelphia. Letters promptly answered giving full information.

Shares of tracts of land can be bought or secured by letter enclosing the first instalment of five dollars, when the subscriber will be furnished with books, maps, &c. Warrantee Deeds given. Persons can also purchase from our Agents.

Route from Philadelphia to Tyrone on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, and thence by Stage to the land. This is a delightful season to visit St. Mary's—the best hotel accommodation is afforded. Enquire for E. C. Schultz, Esq., the Agent for the property at St. Mary's.

Miscellaneous.

A Nervous Wife, and how She was Cured.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

My friend Wilkins married a sweet young girl, of a quiet, amiable disposition, but in no way skilled in those domestic arts, without a knowledge of which the wife's duties are always felt to be hard in the beginning. He was the envy of more than one who had aspired to the possession of her hand. I knew him to be industrious, intelligent and kind-hearted; and I felt sure that he had taken a life companion that would be faithful and loving. The promise was bright enough to warrant a prophecy of more than ordinary happiness.

They removed to another city. Ten years afterwards, in passing through that city, I called upon Wilkins, who met me with the old cordiality. Eyes and face were in a glow of pleasure, when, still grasping his hand I inquired after his wife. His countenance changed instantly.

Poor Mary! he said, in a sad, discouraged way, she has no health.

I am sorry, was my natural response. Sickness and the loss of two of our children, have so worn down body and mind that she is but the shadow of her former self—Worst of all, her nerves are completely shattered. But you must see her. To meet an old friend will do her good. You will take tea with us and spend the evening.

I assented, and then made further inquiries about his family and worldly condition. His story was not a bright one. The birth of her first child was followed by a prostrating sickness, which brought the mother to the utmost verge of life.

She has never had good health since, said Wilkins, in a depressed voice. My income was small, and we could not afford the amount of household assistance that she really required; and so everything was against her restoration to sound health. Children came rapidly, bringing with them more exhausting cares.

And the death of two of our little ones, to which I have referred, seemed to complete the work of ruin. She is now a hopeless invalid—a poor, weak, nervous, unhappy creature, a mere wreck of what you saw ten years ago, moving like a fearful ghost through her daily round of duties, and only kept alive by the constant and careful attentions of a physician. I don't think the doctor has been out of my house for two weeks at any one time for six years, and I'm sure he has received more than fifteen hundred dollars of my money, in that time. The fact is, what with doctor's bills, nurses, medicines and the hundred nameless expenses a sick and nervous wife entails upon a man, my fortunes have been ruined. They keep me poor.

Wilkins spoke in a fretful voice. It was plain that he had grown impatient under the trials to which the bad health of his wife had exposed him.

I called at his store again, towards evening, and went home with him. Had I met Mrs. Wilkins in the street I would not recognize in her the happy bride, who, ten years before, blushing in beauty, I had seen giving her hand in a life partnership, with such loving confidence in the future, to the husband of her choice. Her countenance was wasted, all the beautifully rounded outlines gone; her eyes, deeply sunken, were languid almost to indifference; her hair, once richly luxuriant, had fallen off until scarce half of it remained, and that looked dry and crisp, with here and there a premature line of gray. She stooped slightly, and her motions were lifeless.

A faint smile parted her lips as I grasped her hand with all the warmth of a genuine friendly interest. But it faded almost as soon as it was born. I tried to talk with her in a cheerful strain, and did succeed in awakening an interest in the olden time. But the present was too painfully a real thing; it would not let her thoughts indulge in pleasant fancies. I could not help asking about herself and her children, and this turned the current of her feelings into their wonted channel; and I listened to her sad heart histories and painful experiences in sickness, until my own feelings were deeply shadowed.

I pitied her. What a sombre, suffering life had been hers! Into what a world of misery, instead of happiness, had marriage translated her!

As she talked, I observed her husband carefully. It was plain that he had but little sympathy with his wife's state of feeling. He was a sufferer with her, though in a lighter degree; and, as his suffering originated in hers, there was, plainly, a certain lack of kindly patience towards his companion. Several times he interrupted her, trying to draw the conversation into another channel; and once or twice he threw in deprecating sentences, as if she was exaggerating the unhappy story of her life.

I learned that Mrs. Wilkins, rarely, if ever, went out of her own house. Her duties were very arduous, and her ability, from ill-health, small. Every day she worked to bodily exhaustion, and usually in pain. There was no recreation of any kind bodily or mental. It was a living death. No wonder she was a drooping, wretched, nervous woman.

On the next day I called to see my friend at his store, my mind made up to have a plain talk with him. I referred to his wife, expressing in regard to her my earnest sympathy.

Poor Mary! he replied; her case is hopeless, and mine, too, I fear.

While there's life there's hope, said I, using the physician's half despairing axiom.

He regarded me a little curiously.

How often do you take her out riding? I inquired.

He shook his head. Can't afford carriage hire; much as I can do to pay the doctor. No, no, neither of us have time or money to spend for riding out.

Change and fresh air you will find better and cheaper medicines than doctor's stuff. Do you take her to the seashore once a year? or to the springs, or the mountains?

You are jesting, he replied, with the air of one who felt that an undue liberty had been taken.

Far from it, my friend, I answered, seriously. I feel too warm an interest in you to jest on a subject like this.

The sea-shore, the springs, the mountains are summer luxuries beyond the reach of our ability; said he sadly.

Do not name them as luxuries in your case. If the enervated votary of pleasure and fashion needs them for recreation, and to impart a new zest to the year's succeeding round of gay existence, how much more essential are they for the sick, the nervous, the exhausted toiler in life's field of earnest labor. I fear, my friend, that you have not thought wisely of your wife's true position; that in some sense you are to blame for her present ill health and state of mental depression.

How? Wilkins looked surprised.

The human soul, I answered, is not a piece of senseless machinery; not made up of a series of iron wheels, that can do their work as well in the dark underground chamber as in the broad daylight. Even the flower must have change—air, sunlight, morning, evening, and the advancing season—for its healthy growth and maturity. But the human soul is of higher organization, and of multitudinous wants, compared with the flower. Shut up the flower from the warm sun and the refreshing air, and will it not grow sickly? nay, will it not fade and die? You are treating your wife with less consideration than you would treat a house plant. No wonder she is dying daily.

Wilkins really looked amazed, and I was for a little while in doubt whether he was offended at my freedom, or astounded at his own blindness touching the nature and wants of the human soul he had joined in a life companionship with his own.

Nature's two best physicians, I continued, are pure air and exercise. And, what is better they charge nothing for attendance.

To a large part of mankind, answered Wilkins, time is money. It is so in our case.

Don't make that too positive a conclusion. Increase the strength and you diminish the hours of labor; nay, more, you remove from them the cause of extreme exhaustion. My word for it, if you had spent a hundred dollars a year in giving your wife change of scene, sea-bathing, and mental as well as bodily recreation, your doctor's bill would have been reduced by more than that amount. How often do you take her to concerts or other places of public amusement?

We haven't been to a concert for five years, said he.

And yet I remember that she was passionately fond of music.

We can't afford it, remarked Wilkins, gloomily.

Better go without a dinner occasionally. Health of the soul is quite as essential as health of the body. If you starve the former, what is there in mere eating and drinking worth living for?

Mary wouldn't go if I were to purchase tickets. She has housed herself so long that she has no desire to step across the threshold of her prisonhouse.

For which, speaking frankly, and to an old friend, you are in a great measure to blame. And unless you at once, with a purpose not to be set aside by first difficulties, open wide the doors of the prison house, and actually compel the drooping prisoner to go forth, a few years will close up the history of a wretched life.

Ah, said he, I can feel the force of what you say; but how and where to begin—that is the question.

I notice, was my reply, that Herz, the celebrated composer and pianist, is in our city, and will give, this evening, one of his concerts. Take her to hear him.

The eyes of Wilkins dropped to the floor. I saw what was in his mind. The tickets were one dollar each, and the expense, therefore, larger than he felt he had a right to incur for a simple amusement. He had too many demands for dollars in other and more important directions.

I am going to invite her, said I, and I don't believe she will refuse me.

I'm sure she will not go, said Wilkins quite positively.

We'll see. You will take a note of invitation from me at dinner time. I will inclose tickets for you both, and say that I will call at tea time.

Wilkins was incredulous, and half opposed me; but my interest in his unhappy wife was too strong, and I resolved to have my own way. The tickets and invitations were accordingly sent.

I called at my friend's store late in the afternoon, to go home with him.

Well, said I, cheerfully, what word from your good wife? Will she be ready for the concert?

I'm afraid not. Wilkins shook his head, and looked gloomy.

What did she say?

That it was impossible for her to go out; that she could not leave the children; and, finally, after I met every objection with a reason that could not be gainsayed, she declared that she didn't feel like going, and couldn't think of it.

The ice is very solid and hard to break through, I smiled as I spoke. It is that want of inclination which must be overcome. She will go if we insist upon it.

But Wilkins was of a different opinion. I know her a great deal better than you do, was his answer.

At tea-time, I went home with him. There was a change in Mrs. Wilkins; a glance revealed this. The languor and exhaustion, so painfully apparent on the previous evening, were scarcely visible. Her eyes were brighter, her countenance more elevated, her lips had a firmer outline. I saw that some attention had been given to her dress; and, though not in concert trim, it was plain enough that it would not take her a great while to be in a presentable condition.

Wilkins was in error. His wife did go to that concert, and surprised both him and herself by the amount of pleasure she received from the exquisite performance of Herz. Indeed, she expressed her satisfaction in lively terms, and with a glowing face, in the intervals of many of the pieces.

How is Mrs. Wilkins? I asked of my friend, as I entered his place of business on the next day.

Better than for many months, I am pleased to say, was his answer. She seemed this morning like another woman. That music was like an elixir to her soul.

I had faith in it said I. Depend upon it, Wilkins, you have been consenting to your wife's death by murder and suicide—murder on your part and suicide on hers. My next recommendation is Cape May. Give up your business for a week, and borrow the money to pay the expenses if you haven't the ready cash on hand; but take your wife to Cape May immediately. It will not cost half as much as her funeral. Sea air, bathing, and a sight of old ocean, will put new life into her veins.

She can't possibly leave home. We have too many young children.

She'll have to leave home, and her young children, too, forever, if you don't do something to save her. I spoke with some feeling, for I was a little provoked at my friend's inclination to throw difficulties in the way. Just make up your mind that the thing has to be done, and I'll answer for your wife.

The fact is, it's my opinion that she'll say—yes—on the first proposition.

And so she did. A little management was practised. I accepted another invitation to tea, and during the evening gave as graphic a description as was in my power of the novelty, excitement, and wonderfully beneficial effects of a week at the sea shore. My own experience was quite to the point, having regained strength almost by magic, after a long period of extreme nervous exhaustion.

You must take your wife to the sea shore. It is just what she wants, said I, after the way had been fully prepared.

Wilkins followed up with such a hearty acquiescence that the point was carried under scarcely an appearance of objection. Difficulties were of course suggested; but these were pronounced of such slender importance that they were waived almost as soon as presented. Two days afterwards I had the satisfaction of seeing them off in the steamboat. As I shook hands with them at parting, I could see in the countenance of Mrs. W. some reviving traces of her old girlish beauty; and a re-kindling in her eyes of the light of other days.

A year afterwards, in passing through the city, I made it my business to visit my old acquaintance. He received me with a warmth of manner and cheerfulness of spirit which satisfied me that his state of mind had considerably improved.

How is Mrs. Wilkins? I made almost immediate inquiry.

A broad smile went over his face as he replied:

A thousand per cent. better than when you saw her a year ago.

I am delighted to hear you say so. How did the Cape May prescription answer?

Admirably. It worked like a charm. Mary came back another woman. It was to her almost like discovering the fountain of eternal youth. I never saw such a change in any one.

Didn't she fall back into old habits of mind and body, after her return to the city?

No.

How did you prevent this? I inquired.

By acting on the hint you gave. I hired a wagon for an afternoon, once a week, while the pleasant weather lasted, and showed her all the fine scenery within ten miles of the city. It cost me two dollars each time; but it was cheaper than paying the doctor, and the medicine cured more radically. You can't imagine what a change in her feelings took place. Nothing outside of the narrow circle of home interested her before; thought seemed asleep or palsied; but now she takes an interest in everything. Her soul has awakened from its dead torpor.

Was it not starved into more than infantile weakness? I remarked.

Perhaps so, he said thoughtfully. The mind must have its appropriate food as well as the body.

Nothing is truer than that, I replied. And like the body, it must have the alterations of shade and sunshine, fresh air and exercise. It must have change and recreation, as seasons of labor. Without these, mental health is impossible; and, without mental health, there can be no true bodily health.

Husbands, I fear, are not thoughtful enough about their wives in this particular. I am very uncertain, if every toiling housekeeper, and worn down, nervous, exhausted mother, whose pale face is hardly ever seen beyond the portals of her own door, were forced abroad, occasionally, into the social world, if they would not go willingly; or taken yearly to the springs, the sea shore, or the mountains for a few weeks, that hundreds and thousands of wives and mothers who are now sickly, nervous, and unhappy, would be in the enjoyment of good health and cheerful spirits, giving light to their homes, and happiness to the hearts of their husbands.

Try the prescription, ye men with sickly, toiling, exhausted wives, whose pale faces haunt your homes like ghosts of former blessings. Pity them wisely, and hold them back, while you may, from the low resting places under the green turf towards which they are descending with rapid feet.

Thoughts of Life.

Life—it is a dull routine of eating, drinking, drugging, sleeping—the same thing over and over again each succeeding day of existence, with no hope-illuminated plans and prospects for the future of this life, or of that which begins when the "spirit returns to God who gave it."

There are men whose daily appearance and actions might lead us to think so.

Well, it is one mode of existence.

Life—can it be filled with pleasure seeking and happiness? If one tries to enjoy himself, and has nothing else to do, may he not be cheerful and contented?

It would seem so; but, alas! facts prove that there is not a more unhappy, discontented set of men than mere pleasure-seekers.

Ennui and suicide often destroy the comforts and the life of this class than of any other.

On their monuments should be engraved, Died of having nothing to do.

But there are men whose lives are "illustrated," on whose pages are traced noble thoughts and aims. And here and there, worthy of the artist's study and transfer to canvass, are actions that stand out in bold relief from the many generous deeds that crowd their life-way, and that make men bless and reverence them, and watch to read with loving eyes what lines they may yet trace, what pictures yet grave, for their good and happiness.

Over the grave of such, tears will fall and praises be spoken, and from their life and death brave young hearts will learn holy lessons and gain fresh courage to do and endure.

"In the patience of faith and the labor of love."

To Alleviate Pain in the Feet.

If your feet become painful from walking or standing too long, put them as soon as you can into warm salt and water, mixed in the proportion of two large handfuls of salt to a gallon of water. Sea-water, made warm, is still better, if you can conveniently procure it. Keep your feet and ankles in the salt water till it begins to feel cool, rubbing them well with your hands. Then wipe them dry, and rub them long and hard with a coarse, thick towel, or with a hair-glove.

When the feet are tender, and easily fatigued, it is an excellent practice to go through this process regularly every night, or every morning, or both; also employing it without fail always on coming home from a walk. With perseverance this has cured neuralgia in the feet.

To prevent any roughness that may ensue after taking your hands out of the brine, wash them immediately with soap; or what is still better almond cream, first dipping them into cold water, and then rubbing on a little of the above composition till it forms a lather. Almond cream is much used by gentlemen, as a shaving soap, but it is also a very pleasant and useful article for a lady's washing-stand, being excellent for smoothing the hands, and preventing their chapping in cold weather. It is well to get but a small box at a time, as exposure to the air somewhat dries and discolors it. It should be kept closely covered.

Negro Wit.

Judge Burke, of South Carolina, rode from circuit to circuit on horseback, accompanied by a servant, who was directed to keep close behind him, while he meditated as pleased himself by the way.

Jogging along in this way, on one occasion, the servant pressed too near to the horse on which he rode, and which happened to be an ill-matured brute, and the consequence was, that the horse kicked the negro on the leg, who, observing that it did not interrupt his master's study, sprang off his horse, and picking up a stone threw it at the horse, which it luckily missed, and took effect between the old judge's shoulders.

The instant the negro saw what had been done, he fell in the road, with his hands clasped around his leg, and crying out in apparent agony; as soon as the judge could straighten himself, he turned around and said to the prostrated negro,

Stephen, child, what ails you?

O, massy! was the reply, your horse just kicked me on the leg, and almost broke it.

Well, child, said the judge, he just kicked me between the shoulders, and almost broke my back, too.

Who is a Gentleman.

A gentleman is not merely a person acquainted with certain forms and the etiquette of life, easy and self-possessed in society, able to speak and act and move in the world without awkwardness, and free from habits which are vulgar and in bad taste. A gentleman is something much beyond this; all that which lies at the root of all his ease, and refinement, and tact, and power of pleasing, is the same spirit which lies at the root of every Christian virtue.

It is the thoughtful desire of doing in every instance, as he would that others should do unto him. He is constantly thinking, not how he may give pleasure to others, or the mere sense of pleasing, but how he can show respect for others—how he may avoid hurting their feelings. When he is in society, scrupulously ascertains the position and relation of every one with whom he is brought in contact, that he may give to each his due honor, his proper position. He studies how he may avoid touching, in conversation, upon any subject which may needlessly hurt their feelings—how he may abstain from any allusion which may call up a disagreeable or offensive association.

A gentleman never alludes to, never even appears conscious of, any personal defect, bodily deformity, inferiority of talent, of rank, or reputation, in the person in whose society he is placed. He never assumes any superiority for himself—he never ridicules, never sneers, never boasts, never makes a display of his own power, or rank, or advantages—such as is implied in ridicule, or sarcasm, or abuse—as he never indulges in habits, or tricks, or inclinations which may be offensive to others.

For the Patriot.

Statistics, No 2—Education.

It is almost a self-evident truth that no republican institutions can exist for any length of time among an ignorant people. Where republics are attempted to be formed among the ignorant, anarchy soon destroys all vestiges of any civil government. The South American Republics are deplorable evidences of this fact. It would be better for them to be under the most despotic rule than to attempt to form a free government. Then some order, some system, would characterize the government, even if tempered with severity; now, none. They were not prepared for the end they sought, and consequently, failed in the attempt. On the contrary, in the United States, the people were educated from the beginning, and the purest principles of civil liberty and religious worship, instilled into the minds of all the young. The consequence was, when tyranny would hold them in his iron grasp, they rebelled, and on the eve of rebellion, formed a free government dispensing equal rights and equal justice to all.

In a monarchical form of government, the few are educated and the masses are ignorant. In a republic, all are educated. This is the principle which distinguishes the one from the other. "Knowledge is power;" and it does and will rule the world. In a monarchy, the nobility are educated and rule. In a republic the working men are educated,—they are the nobility and rule. And in the same degree that a people are educated, they will demand justice from their rulers, and equal rights for themselves. Ignorance may be imposed upon, trodden under foot, made a slave to an educated master; but Knowledge knows her rights, and knowing, will dare maintain them. Look at Europe at the present time. See the struggle now going on between the oppressor and the oppressed. Why is it that this struggle has begun? And why, when begun, are the few able to rule the many? Why does the laboring man clamor for liberty? He has learned there is a land far away across the blue water, where the working man is free; where the people rule; where there are no nobility and no serfs; where every man, rich or poor, is equal in the eye of the law; where his children may receive the education he can never hope to obtain, and become eligible to the highest offices in the land. He awakes from his stupor and looks about him. He sees the costly palaces and the fine gardens, the rich raiment and the luxurious living of the effeminate nobility, and in his poor hovel, eating the bitter crust of poverty, he asks himself, why are these things so? Why am I clothed in rags and my neighbor in fine linen? Why is he to roll in wealth and I starve through poverty? Who made him a ruler over me? Because I am born a laborer, is that a reason I should always remain so? and because he was born a noble, is that a reason I should serve him? These questions are to-day agitating the people of the old country; and hence, those plots and attempts at assassination, which are detected as soon as formed, and which only bring fresh misery upon the millions of the down-trodden masses.

Why do they fail? They have not the knowledge for the formation of plots deep enough, or combinations vast enough. The superior education of their masters more than compensates for their superior numbers. Ignorance is their lot; and as long as they can be held in ignorance, so long they can be held in bondage. Suppose the inhabitants of Europe were as well educated and as well informed upon the subject of human rights, as the people of the United States, what a terrible vengeance would the first act of injustice bring down upon the crowned heads of Europe. How short the time before a general uprising would hurl tyranny from her throne, and one free government take the place of the many despots! Look at Switzerland, the only republic in Europe which has withstood the shock of revolutions,—that land lately threatened by one of the most powerful nations, because she would not permit any offenders to go unpunished. Prussia was numerically six times as strong, and the Swiss anticipating a bitter struggle, rushed from cabin and from palace,—from city and from mountain side, rallying to the defence of their nation's honor. This republic is the best educated nation in the world. Scarce a person over

Poetry.

Infinite Wisdom.
BY JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Whoever studies the historic page,
Shall find in every realm, in every age,
The same return of error, vice and crime—
The same dramatic person on the stage;
Or varied only by the name or clime;
Shall still behold the fair and candid race,
Dupes of the artful, victims of the base.

And yet Man coming from his Maker's hand,
Cannot exchange his nature if he would;
The dark and cunning thus must ever stand;
Prone to all evil, and averse to good.
The villain's heart can never lose its brand;
The honest heart can never take a hood;
Oh! must it prove until the judgment day,
That half mankind was born the other's prey?

Yet let not, hence, presumption dare to scan
The scope and compass of Almighty mind;
Or scrutinize with impious doubt the plan
Of wisdom and of goodness still combined;
Born from the clod of earth, immortal Man
To this poor wretched world is not confined;
Though but in part this system bounds his view,
There is an eye that looks creation through.

Our Neighbors.

How many social ties are neglected,
That should rejoice our days,
How many spirits sit dejected,
Beside the world's highway!

A blessing, then, be on those pleasant faces
That genial warmth impart!
Sunbeams they are that brighten darksome places
Within the human heart.

Such cheerful faces have I to befriend me,
In my retired street;
What pleasant nods and kindly smiles they send me,
Where'er our glances meet.

How joyous is our morning salutation!
How hearty our good-night!
Ten thousand visits without preparation,
How welcome with delight.

The household news, now earnestly related,
And small domestic cares!
The aches and ailments mutually stated,
And costs of various wares.

Trifling, indeed, these themes of conversation,
And yet momentous still;
For the sword of household occupation
These topics almost fill.

And let not those who legislate for nations,
Despite those little things,
The heads of family administrations
Bear heavier cares than kings.

Our silent street is like a river flowing Towards the commercial sea;
But the rude storms, with all their furious blowing,
Do us no injury.

There is no tariff on the freight we charter,
From heart to heart they move;
The nobler fortunes that we make by barter,
Are those of growing love.

May peace be with you, then, my pleasant neighbors,
Wherever you abide,
And when we leave this scene of earthly labors,
We'll still keep side by side.

The Motive.

Some go to church just for a walk,
Some go there to laugh and talk,
Some go there to meet a friend,
Some go to learn the parson's sermon;
Some go there to wound his fame,
Some go there for observation,
Some go there to doze and nod,
But few go there to worship God!

Anecdotes.

One very cold night a rough old fellow
Was aroused from his slumbers by a loud knocking at his door. After some hesitation, he went to the window and asked—
Who's there?
A friend! was the answer.
What do you want?
Want to stay here all night.
Stay there two nights, if you want, was the benevolent reply.

A fashionable countess asking a young nobleman which he thought the prettiest flowers, roses or tulips, he replied with great gallantry—
Your ladyship's two lips, before all the roses in the world.

May I be so bold, Miss, as to inquire your age?
Certainly; I am a little past thirty-two—most three years younger than mother!

To a fond mother, whose children were at the time making themselves disagreeable, a gentleman observed—
I have a decided preference for bad children, madam.

How strange—and, pray, for what reason?
said she.
Because they are always sent out of the room.

John, did you find any eggs in the old hen's nest this morning?
No, sir. If the old hen laid any, she mis-laid them.

The most ingenious plea of an old beggar was, that being too old to earn a living by his own hands, he is obliged to depend on others' alms.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington street, N. Y.,
And 28 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having
some reliable standard for the strength of POT-
ASH. The adulteration has become so general,
that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated
with salt, which is destructive in making soap;
it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle,
being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid
in many cases, and very troublesome to the re-

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle
of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes
through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like
the first, (name and picture, twisted Lead-bread, with a glass effecting water on the top, as you see in the bill.)

Cheating a Counsellor.

A few miles from Barnestown, the residence of the famous Anthony Malone, an cotermporaneous with that worthy, there lived a jolly old squire of the regular Irish school named Kedagh Geoghagan. This old gentleman, together with a great deal of Irish virtues, contained in himself no small amount of what his enemies would call downright
Irish vices and infamies.

Among them he was exceedingly litigious in which disposition, the propensity of such a convenience as the prime argument, was perhaps in some degree an encouragement to that as may, the assistance of Malone was often given to extricate his unlucky neighbor out of those scrapes which his infatuation was almost daily leading him into.
His patience and good will were at length exhausted, when after years of such hard conduct, he had to declare himself absolutely sick of the color of Kedagh's gold.

This unlucky conclusion of his impudence came about at the very moment when the counsellor's law was most required. Poor
Kedagh had got himself into a terrible hole.
Some sharp attorney had taken under his protection, one of his numerous victims and law and equity were together, hurling their thunder on his now defenceless head.
He knew that Malone would, in a few days be going to town to attend Term, and that unless his anger was previously appeased, it would be idle to expect assistance from him. To pay him would be an abandonment of those principles on which, through good report and evil report, he had acted for half a century; and pay him he would not.

—and yet, to get free of the dilemma, without doing so, was a puzzle. He, however, at last, hit on the expedient which will be seen in the sequel.

The day for Malone's departure had arrived, and he was already in his carriage departing out of his avenue gate, when his progress was stopped by a fine herd of cattle turning down that direction.

Hallo, my man, shouted the counsellor to the herdsman—whose bullocks are those?
Mr. Geoghagan's your honor, replied the fellow, touching his hat,—that is, they are sir, but he sent them to your honor, with compliments, and this bit of a note; at the same time flinching the mislappen epistle from the recesses of his pantaloons pocket, and handing it to the great man.

Hum—aye—unforeseen troubles—hope be excused—request a continuation of services—O, very well, my good man, at right; present my compliments to your honor, and tell him I shall feel happy in making my utmost exertions in his business—dismiss them, and deliver them to the herd—two, three—ten, I believe, are in it—upon a word, a very fine lot of bullocks, and a credit to the feeder, and you may tell your master I said so. Stay, there's a half-a-crown for you to drink my health, since I'll not below myself—drive on, John.

Next vacation Malone returned home, full of complacent delight at the good news had to tell his generous client, for whom splendid talents had produced an unquestioned victory. The morning after his arrival when taking his usual walk through his coners, he met his herd, and after receiving his congratulations on his safe return, beg-making the natural enquiries regarding stock.

Fine weather you had while I was away,
Thady.

Yes, indeed, 'twas delightful, your honor.
Upon my word, I never knew it so soft this time of year before. An old parlant gentleman of my acquaintance, that was I.

Cheating a Counsellor.

A few miles from Barnestown, the residence of the famous Anthony Malone, and contemporaneous with that worthy, there lived a jolly old squire of the regular Irish school, named Kedagh Geoghagan. This old gentleman, together with a great deal of Irish virtues, contained in himself no small amount of what his enemies would call downright high-vices and infamies.

Among them he was exceedingly litigious, as which disposition, the propensity of such a character as the prime defendant, was, perhaps in some degree an encouragement; he that as it were, the assistance of Malone was often given to extricate his unlucky neighbor out of those scrapes which his infatuation was almost daily hurling him into; but patience and good will had at length exhausted, when after years of such hard service, he had to declare himself absolutely tired of the color of Kedagh's gold.

This unlucky continuation of his imprudence came about at the very moment when the counsellor's aid was most required. Poor Kedagh had got himself into a terrible hobble. Some sharp attorney had taken under his protection, one of his numerous victims, and law and equity were together, hurling their thunder on his now defenceless head. He knew that Malone would, in a few days, be going to town to attend Term, and that, unless, his anger was previously appeased, it would be idle to expect assistance from him. To pay him would be an abandonment of those principles on which, through good report and evil report, he had acted for nigh half a century; and pay him he would not—and yet, to get free of the dilemma without doing so, was a puzzle. He, however, at last, hit on the expedient which will be seen in the sequel.

The day for Malone's departure had arrived, and he was already in his carriage driving out of his avenue gate, when his progress was stopped by a fine herd of cattle turning down in that direction.

Hallo, my man, shouted the counsellor to the herdsman—whose bullocks are those?

Mr. Geoghagan's your honor, replied the fellow, touching his hat—that is, they were, sir, but he sent them to your honor, with his compliments, and this bit of a note; at the same time fumbling the mislaid epistle from the recesses of his pantaloons pocket, and handing it to the great man.

Hum—aye—unforeseen troubles—hope to be excused—request a continuation of my services—O, very well, my good man, all's right; present my compliments to your master, and tell him I shall feel happy in using my utmost exertions in his business—drive them on, and deliver them to the herd—one, two, three—ten, I believe, are in it—upon my word, a very fine lot of bullocks, and do credit to the feeder, and you may tell your master I said so. Stay, there's half-a-crown for you to drink my health, since I'll not be below myself—drive on, John.

Next vacation Malone returned home, full of complacent delight at the good news he had to tell his generous client, for whom his splendid talents had produced an unequivocal victory. The morning after his arrival, when taking his usual walk through his concerns, he met his herd, and after receiving his congratulations on his safe return, began making the natural enquiries regarding his stock.

Fine weather you had while I was away, Thady.

Yes, indeed, 'twas delightful, your honor. Upon my word, I never knew it so soft at this time of year before. An old parliament gentleman of my acquaintance, that was laid up in his bed-room ever since winter, was able to go down all the way to the Cove of Cork last week, it was so mild.

Dth! dth! think o' that now. Yes, indeed—and how is the grass coming on, Thady?

I never seen the like, your honor, if you'd only just step down and look at it you'd see, yourself, sure.

You didn't find Mr. Geoghagan's bullocks too great an animal, I hope.

Sir!

Old Kedagh's bullocks; those that he sent here the day I went to Dublin; upon my word, Thady, they shamed you, they were so superior to any you ever sent off my pastures.

Och, he's a very judgmental feeder, your honor, but for all that, I'd show my herd with his any day. But, as to the bullocks——bedad, your honor, myself doesn't rightly know what you are talking about at all, at all.

Why! the bullocks he sent here the day I went to Dublin; the ten fat bullocks by his own man, Kelly, I think, is his name.

Arrah, the deuce of a bullock, begging your honor's pardon, he ever sent here, the old rogue—they'd bring the murrain or some murrain among us, so they would.

Old Kedagh tricked me, then! shouted the counsellor.

And so he did. The herd had been waiting an hour at the head of the avenue to intercept him, as we have related, and no sooner was the carriage out of sight by an angle of the road, than, according to his master's directions, he turned the bullocks' heads, and before evening they were browsing quietly in their native pastures, whence they had been called that morning to effect the deception.

It was little wonder that Malone should be deeply exasperated at the trick, so humiliating to him, and successful to his outwitted, and just as little that honest Kedagh should take credit to himself for so neat a piece of chicanery; it was, in fact, a subject of merit to him for a long time after, until some dilemma, similar to that which gave rise to the expedient, we have related, occurred, and compelled him to try and make his peace with his incensed advocate.

The hopeless task was undertaken in the same spirit that characterized his former proceedings. Kedagh took to bed; was ill; very ill; going to die, in fact. It was not long before an account of his illness reached Barnestown, and fast on the heels of the report followed a messenger from the invalid, requesting to see his dear friend—the counsellor.

Confound the rascal! exclaimed Malone, his impudence is insupportable; what can he want with me?

Oh, your honor, said the afflicted messenger, he's stretched for death, and won't die any if he doesn't see you and the priest.

Well, now for curiosity's sake, said Malone, I will go over and hear what he has to say—it would really be a pity not to hear Kedagh repenting.

The counsellor arrived, and was shown into the darkened room, where poor Kedagh was waiting his final call.

You wished to see me, Mr. Geoghagan, I believe, said Malone, in the coldest tone of voice he could assume.

Counsellor, dear, is that you? whined the invalid, from the middle of the bed in the corner.

Upon my word, Mr. Geoghagan, you may well ask the question with doubt, after the manner you treated me and used my name.

Oh, counsellor, dear, sure you won't be tripping up old stories on a dying man—God forgive me my sins, but I've a great deal to answer for—forget and forgive, avick—that was your father's way, rest his soul; knew him well, and many and many's the time I saw him sitting in his arm chair, and stroking your head, and saying:

Anthony, my boy, you'll never be your father's son if you desert your friend in distress.

It's my will I'd be talking of, avick. I'm afraid the boys will be quarrelling with one another about the money, when I'm gone, and I want a will that will hinder them; and who would I get but yourself: the first lawyer in the three kingdoms, and more betoken, my old friend's son?

Really, Mr. Geoghagan, must try to be excused—my interference with your affairs already—

Ah, now, avick machree, why would you be talking about that, and cutting short a dying man's breath; let me tell you all first, and then sure, if you're for leaving me, I can't help you. I'm going, counsellor, dear; going, quick; but I'd like to do justice first, so just put in a legacy of £500 now to my dear and valued friend, meaning yourself, avick, and makes it so that it can't be broken now.

Kedagh, my dear Kedagh, this is so good, so generous; really I must forget and forgive now, though to tell the truth, Kedagh, I was angry.

Ah, Anthony, my darling, this is just like your father; rest his soul; but 'deed I was wrong.

Kedagh, now, my dear friend, this generosity—

Counsellor, dear, I always intended it.

My dear friend, this is a melancholy duty, and trust me, that all my talents can do shall be done for you, to secure your little property.

Ah, Anthony, my darling, give me your hand; where are you avick? I knew it was in your father's son to be generous; so now sit down, my dear counsellor, and let us to business, an' don't forget the five five hundred.

The bill was drawn and approved, not forgetting the five hundred; and Kedagh, after uttering a profusion of thanks, for what Malone assured, was a will that all the lawyers in Ireland couldn't break; requested it should be left with him to get copied, after which, when completed, it should be left with himself. Malone, of course, acceded, and a day was appointed when he should return and receive the sacred trust from the hands of the dying man. The day came, and with it the punctual counsellor, who was no little surprised to find Kedagh out of bed, and much improved in personal appearance.

I am better, avick, said he, thank goodness, a deal better, and able to sit up; but sure, who knows how long it will last with all the trouble I'm in. May be now, counsellor, dear, you could advise me a bit: here's the will, avick; put it in your breast pocket now safe, for a deal depends on that bit of a parcel. But, I was talking about the law; it's this way, avick.

And Kedagh proceeded with a long explanation of all the ins and outs of his new troubles, and received from his kind-hearted friend such assurances of assistance as completely satisfied him. From this time forward, Kedagh became better and better by beautiful gradations of convalescence, until at last he was reported quite well to his disappointed expectants. His cause was undertaken spiritedly by Malone, and it is needless to say, that it succeeded; the friendship of the counsellor became now as conspicuous as the contrary feelings were formerly, and excited the surprise of all who knew both, which was still more heightened, when Kedagh was called to his people at last; by Malone's attending his corpse to the grave as one of the chief mourners, and conducting all the affairs of the funeral.

No sooner was our poor hero safely deposited, than Malone announced to the relatives that the will was lodged with him and collected all of them in his parlor, for the purpose of reading the important instrument to them.

All preliminaries being arranged, the parties seated, sentiments of condolence expressed on all sides, and Kedagh's honesty and goodness boldly asserted by every one, and a defiance hurled at all gainsayers, the will was produced, acknowledged, and handed Mr. Matthews, Malone's clerk, for perusal. He began, and according as he proceeded and settled with each devise or legate, as the case was—

My poor father, blubbered one of the fortunates, and another, in due succession, as they ascertained their luck, until the clerk's voice could scarcely be heard amid the general din. Malone was, however, listening all the time with that quiet sort of satisfaction which we feel, when we know that hope and certainty are to shake hands; until the clerk had dispatched the sentence immediately preceding his part of the will, and continued, on as it were, skipping the important sentence.

Now, now, Matthews, my good fellow, said the counsellor, interrupting him, do not be so precipitate, pray, go on, in such serious matters as these, it is very unbecoming to be so giddy; go on, if you please—and to my dear and valued friend—go on, pray, don't you see it?

Faith sir, said the puzzled clerk, looking over the whole document, I don't see it's a dear and valued friend in it from top to bottom.

Mr. Matthews, you are insufferably stupid, and really this will not do at all: give me the will, sir; and seizing it from the hand of the terrified clerk, he looked over and over it, but in vain—the titter could no longer be suppressed. It was too bad.

Kedagh! Kedagh! you lived a rogue, and you died a rogue, shouted the out-witted lawyer, and bolted out of the room amid the ill-suppressed laughter of the company.

Kedagh, true to the last, copied every line of the well drawn instrument, but the part containing the legacy to Malone, and gained all his ends, and cheated a counsellor.

The Velocity of and Colors of Lightning

The lightning of the first two classes does not last for more than one-thousandth part of a second; but a less duration in passing than one-millionth of a second is attributed to the light of electricity of high tension. In comparison with this velocity, the most rapid artificial motion that can be produced appears repose. This has been exemplified by Professor Wheatstone, in a beautiful experiment. A wheel made to revolve with such celerity as to render its spokes invisible, is seen with all spokes distinct, as if at rest, when illustrated by a flash of light, because the flash had come and gone before the wheel had time to make a perceptible advance.

The color of lightning is variously orange, white and blue, verging to violet. Its hue appears to depend on the intensity of electricity and height in the atmosphere. The more electricity there is passing through the air in a given time, the whiter and more dazzling is the light. Violet and blue colored lightning are observed to be discharged from the storm clouds, high in the atmosphere, where the air is rarefied and mal-gases. The electric spark made to pass through the receiver of an air-pump, exhibits a blue or violet light in proportion as the vacuum is complete.—Peterson's Physical Geography.

Be Content.

Freeman Hunt, in his 'Worth and Wealth,' thus beautifully depicts the charms of a contented spirit—of such a one as it is written, "a contented mind is a continual feast."

The health, strength, freshness and sweet sleep of youth, are yours. Young love by day and night encircles you. Hearts unsoiled by the deep sin of covetousness, beat fondly with your own. None, ghoul-like, listen for the death tick in your chamber. Your shoes have value in men's eyes, only when you tread in them. The smiles on wealth can purchase grief you, living; and tears that rarely drop on rosewood coffins will fall from pitying eyes upon you, dying. Be wise in being content with competency. You have to eat, drink, and wear enough. Then have you all the rich man's bath. What though he fare more sumptuously? He shortens his life, increases pains and aches, impairs his health thereby. What if his ransom be more costly? God loves him none the more, and man's respect, in such regard, comes ever mingled with his envy.

Nature is yours in all her glory; her ever varying and forever beautiful face smiles peace upon you. Her hills and valleys, fields and flowers, rocks, streams and holy places, know no desecration in the step of poverty; but welcome ever to wealth and beauty—rich and poor alike.

Be content! The robin chirps as gayly as the gorgeous bird of paradise. Less gaudy is his plumage, less splendid his surroundings. Yet no joy that cheers the eastern beauty, but comes upon his barren hills to bless the nest that robin builds. His flight is as strong, in the best use of that we have—wasting no golden hours in idle wishes for things that burden those who own them, and could not bless us if we had them, as the gifts already bestowed by a wisdom that never errs. Being content, the poor man is rich; while he who counts his millions hath little joy if he be otherwise.

Cure for a Run-round.

That disease of the finger or the toe, commonly called a run-round, may be easily cured by a remedy so simple that persons who have not seen it tried are generally incredulous as to its efficacy. The first symptoms of the complaint are heat, pain, swelling, and redness at the top of the nail. The inflammation, if not checked, will soon go round the whole of the nail, causing intense pain, accompanied by a festering or gathering of yellow matter, and ending in the loss of the nail. To prevent all this, as soon as the first symptoms of swelling and inflammation commence, lay the finger flat on the table and let the nail be scratched all over with the sharp point of a pair of scissors, or a penknife. This excoarication must be done first crossways, and then lengthways, so as thoroughly to scratch up the whole surface of the nail, leaving it rough and white.

This little operation does not give the slightest pain; and we have never, in a single instance known it to fail. By next morning the finger will be well. If done before the festering commences, it is a certain and speedy cure. And it will even succeed at a later stage of the disease, by first opening with a needle that part of the swelling where the yellow matter has begun to appear; and afterwards by scratching up the surface of the nail with scissors or penknife.

Happy Girls.

Who cannot love them? With cheeks like roses, bright eyes, and elastic step, how cheerfully they go to work. Blessed indeed will those men be who secure such prizes. Contrast those who do nothing but sigh all day, and live but to follow the fashions, who never earn the bread they eat, or the shoes they wear, who are languid and lazy from one week's end to the other. Who but a simpleton and popinjay would prefer the latter, if he were looking for a companion? Give us the working girls; they are worth their weight in gold. They see their muddling a nag, or jump a dozen feet to clear of a spider or a fly? they have no satisfaction, or silly airs about them. When they meet you, they speak without putting on a dozen silly airs, or trying to show off to a better advantage, and you feel as if you were talking to a human being, and not to a painted automaton or a fallen angel.

If girls knew how sadly they misused it, while they endeavor to show off their delicate hands and un-souled skins, and put on a thousand airs, they would give worlds for the situation of the working ladies, who are above them in intelligence, in honor, in every thing, as the heavens are above the earth.

Be wise, then; if you have made fools of yourselves through life. Turn over a new leaf, and begin, though late, to live and act as human beings: as companions to immortal souls, and not to playthings and dolls. In no other way can you be happy and subvert the design of your existence.

Curious Invention of Shot.

Almost everybody has seen a shot tower; but perhaps not all who have seen one knows what is the necessity of having so high a structure for making shot. Previous to the year 1782, persons called plumbers were the only ones who made shot. The process was to let the melted lead drop into the water. But in this process the part that first touched the water was always flattened. About 1782, a man named Watts, living in Bristol, England, by trade a plumber, and shoemaker, was assisted by his wife in the latter operation. Mrs. Watts was a woman of some genius, and often reflected upon the subject of devising some means to make shot more round. It was her particular business to cast the shot, and she experimented for this purpose by dropping the melted lead into oil and other liquids besides water; but the shot were still indented or flattened on the sides which first came in contact with the liquids. She retired to bed one night, thinking deeply on the subject of making shot round. In the anxious state of her mind her sleep was not sound, of course. She began to dream; and her dream is thus related by a writer in the Scientific American.

"She dreamed of going into a neighbor's shop, a batter by trade, and while talking to him she heard shot falling, and on asking him if he made shot, he went out, brought in a handful, and they were perfectly round. In much surprise she exclaimed, 'My God! how do you make them round?' By dropping them from a great height," said the latter. Mrs. Watts awoke under the exciting discovery, aroused her husband, informed him of her dream, when they both dressed themselves, tried it upon the highest place on their own premises and found the shot rounder than before, but still indented. The next day they tried it from the tower of St. Thomas' Church, that Jesus' sons feet ever its base, when they attained shot rounder than the home attempt, but not yet perfect. The next attempt was made in the shaft of a colliery, a few miles from Bristol, at a place called Kingswood, and from this trial they obtained perfectly round shot. Watts ascertained the height necessary to make them round, at trials of different depths, entered a caveat for a patent, made known his discovery to a wealthy acquaintance, erected a shot tower, realized eighty thousand pounds, undertook to erect a large block of buildings at Clifton; sunk all he had made before they were half finished, and became poor in his old age. I have passed this block many times, and it was called Watts' Folly.

There is no doubt that Watts or his wife made this discovery. But the idea, according to some, belongs to Watts more than his wife. It was Watts and not Mrs. Watts who is supposed to have dreamed on the subject. Watts is said to have dreamed that he was out in a shower, and that it rained lead instead of water, and thus was engendered the idea of giving perfect roundness to shot by letting the melted lead fall a great distance.—Sunday Leader.

Truth and Liberty.

It is a historical fact that great truths never spring at once into public favor. They are the product of a slow growth, and the pathway to their success is strewn with the bones of heroes and the graves of martyrs. They suffer and toil and die for the truth which men are so slow to perceive; but their death spreads new energy and life through the ranks of their followers—their names are chanted as the apostles of liberty and the martyrs of the truth. Whose names are held in veneration and love, and whispered from continent to continent, as a watchword of strength, if not those who have suffered and died for a truth. When the Romans longed to regain their lost liberties, they turned not to the maxims of those in high places, said to be the favored of the gods, but to the name and maxims of Cato, who died for the principles they cherished.

There have been in the history of every great truth, periods of decline, when it seemed to have lost its hold upon the hearts of men. But from this very decay, it has sprung up into renewed life and vigor. In the Middle Ages, Christianity seemed lost and buried beneath the pagan rites, and glittering forms, which seemed crushed from it the life and the soul. But these very rites—this glitter of unmeaning forms, attracted the attention of people and nations which otherwise would never have received it, and thus the seed of a truer religion was sown, and thus from the decay of the first genius sprang up a wider growth, till Luther's time, when it received a higher life. It was at first presented in crude forms, trammelled with narrow, bitter and uncharitable sectarian warfare. Yet these were all necessary, and from these sectarian contentions spring to better things, and he must be slow to discern the signs of the times, who fails to perceive that a higher idea is now taking possession of the minds of men, and that we now look less to creeds than to actions—that we now look rather for an exemplification of Christianity in a man's life, than in the faith he professes. Thus, forever truth lives on, and will live, springing into newness of life, from the very circumstance of its periodical decay. Can you extinguish liberty? Never! You may bury it up beneath your feet, and press it down with thrones, and sceptres, and despotisms—you may trace the lines of its epitaph, and vainly imagine that it shall rise up in renewed strength, bringing confusion and shame upon its enemies. Thus, forever, and everywhere, decay and death are but the condition of a wider and more universal life. Hear it, ye proud and oppressive! hear it, ye mean and selfish! and hear it, oh heart, ye who toil and suffer for the truth; hear the deep words of wisdom that fall from the lips of the divine Jesus, as he stood beneath the very shadow of the cross upon which he died. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a kernel of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it live, it bringeth forth much fruit."—Rev. E. H. Chapin, D. D.

Old Style and New Style.

In order to make this fully clear, it will be necessary to remember that a year is designed to include the exact period of time which the earth takes to make one revolution around the sun. This is accomplished in 365 days and nearly six hours; but, as the calendar must consist of complete days, these six hours are omitted, and in four years they make up a whole day, when one is added to the year, making what is called a leap year. This, however, is not strictly correct, for it is ascertained by accurate calculations that a solar year is three hundred and sixty-five days, five hours, forty-three minutes and sixty seconds, or a complete day, if this were permitted to go on, the first of January would gradually fall back towards mid-summer; and, in the time of Pope Gregory XIII. (1582) it was found that the vernal equinox, which in A. D. 325, happened on the 21st of March, actually occurred on the 10th. The Pope, for the purpose of restoring the correctness of the calendar, ordered the days to be dropped that year. This reformation was called "The New Style," while the former calendar was denominated "The Old Style." Probably on account of the asperities engendered by the religious difficulties of the times, the New Style was not adopted in England until 1751, when it was found that another entire day had accumulated. An act of Parliament was then passed, in which it was directed that eleven days be dropped out of the calendar in 1752.

In this country, the Old Style was not entirely discarded in colloquial discourse until about fifty years ago. To guard against the disarrangement of the calendar in future, chronologers now omit the leap year at the end of three or four centuries, which plan is found to balance the excess of eleven minutes 12.4 seconds, this being added by making every fourth year a leap year. Every year that can be divided by four is not therefore a leap year, as people generally suppose. 1800 was not; for then one of these intercalary days had accumulated, and was dropped, to the great consternation of many persons, particularly the ladies, who thought that the almanac makers had committed a most unpardonable and ungrateful blunder in taking from them what they looked upon as their vested rights. To take time by the forelock, we respectfully announce to them that they will be in a similar predicament in 1900. There are now, therefore, twelve days' difference between the Old and New Styles, and, in order to compute the date of events correctly, and not fall into blunders, which even Bancroft has not avoided, we should recollect to allow ten days for the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries eleven for the eighteenth, and twelve for the nineteenth.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Sept. 12th, 1857.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

The Second Brigade, M. V. M.

The Second Brigade of the First Division, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, will be in camp near Oakdale Village, in Taunton on the 23d, 24th, and 25th days of September.

This Brigade was first organized in 1840, when Freeman White, Esq., of Braintree, was elected Brigadier General. He resigned in 1841, and was succeeded by Col. Henry Dunham, of Abington, who was elected Brigadier General early in 1842, and removed from office by sentence of a court martial in 1850. In May of that year, Col. Eliah Ward, of Middleboro', was promoted to the vacant office, which he held until Oct. 1855, when he was removed by Gov. Gardner upon the request of Maj. Gen. Edmunds, who represented him as being incompetent. Ebenezer W. Pierce, of Freetown, the present incumbent, was elected Brigadier General Nov. 7th, 1855, being promoted from the office of Lieutenant Colonel of the Third Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and the Brigade Staff at present consists of Major D. ### Firemen's Muster.

OF THE FIREMEN OF NEW ENGLAND.

At Worcester, Sept. 3d and 4th.

The Worcester Transcript, of Sept. 5th, gives a glowing description of this splendid affair, from which we copy the following extracts:—

"The weather was fine, but warm, and the concourse of people were large—who set in by thousands to witness this grand trial of skill."

"There were fifty-three companies present, which had come up to the grand carnival to contest their relative merits. Full uniformed, with their engines appropriately decorated with floral wreaths, banners dancing as if conscious of the general exhilaration, and music lavishing its unending melody upon unending thousands, lent to our streets a gay and lively appearance the like of which has not been witnessed in Worcester for many a year."

On Friday a procession was formed, which marched through some of our principal thoroughfares to their head quarters on the common. It was a fine and imposing sight. Some of the companies marched with each members hand resting on the shoulder of his neighbor; others with hands uplifted, presenting an unique and novel spectacle. A few waggish disciples of the "maslens", slightly varied the motions by bringing their thumbs into friendly proximity to their nasal organs, and indulged in sundry pantomimic manipulations which were more diverting than dignified. The procession was nearly an hour in passing. There were various decorations along the route, of significant and appropriate character."

"The poll with the flag staff, by which the virtue of the engines were to be tested, was 180 feet in height. The prizes awarded were five in number, of $300, $200, $100, $75, and $50. Valuable and generous as these prizes are, all the companies would gladly forfeit the pecuniary consideration for the sake of the honor of victory."

"Four of the prizes were made up by the city of Worcester, the seventy-five dollar one was by a private individual."

"The judges took their places in the steeple of a church, which commanded a clear view of the staff, and the whole field. The contest was opened by Merrimack Company No. 4, of Lowell. On the first trial, the hose burst—but on the second, they raised 170 feet."

"The prizes awarded were as follows:—

"First prize of $300 to Torrent company of Manchester, N. H.—180 feet."

"Second prize of $200 to Merrimack of Lowell—170 feet."

"Third prize of $100 to Torrent of Roxbury—161 ft. 6 in."

"Fourth prize of $75 to the independent of West Bridgewater—160 feet."

"Fifth prize of $50 to Barnicot of Boston—150 feet."

"The Machines which took the prizes were of Honomma's manufacture."

"The highest point reached, was 180 feet, the lowest 115."

"The Niagara reached 155 feet; it will thus be seen that it came within five feet of carrying off prize No. five."

"The playing was unusually spirited and successful. The Torrent company of Manchester played strong and handsome, dropping her water over the flag. As no other company came within sight of the flag, the Torrent company was declared the victor."

"At Springfield last year the Bay State of Westfield, won the prize on 148 feet. The year preceding that, the Hope company, of Great Barrington, won the prize on a stream of 164 feet. The playing to-day has been decidedly superior."

"The prospect from elevated places was a magnificent one. The temporary seats were thronged with ladies, and the entire common was crowded with a motley and ever changing crowd of spectators. Within the enclosure, the rapid movements of the gayly uniformed companies, in the enthusiasm of the contest, made the scene still more picturesque and striking."

"The arrangements were perfect, and were admirably carried out; and gave general satisfaction not only to those who took part in the ceremonies, but to the vast multitude who had assembled."

ANTI-NEUROUS CIGAR. Professor Ryserson, the gentlemanly proprietor of the "Emporium of Fashion," corner of Hancock and Granite streets, ever desirous of gratifying his numerous customers in every rational indulgence, in addition to other attractions of his establishment, has opened a new department, where the pure Cuban weed will be found, of aromatic excellence, and of superior flavor. Among the number, we noticed the following, which comes thus strongly recommended:—

"The tobacco from which the Anti-Neurotic Cigars are manufactured has been subjected to a rigid chemical process, an entirely new discovery in the art of Cigar-making that cost me years of patient study and toil, and is known by no one except myself. I take pleasure in recommending them to the public as far superior to any manufactured according to the old method in this country or Cuba, for those who are in want of a sweet, mild, fragrant Cigar, whose influence is not injurious to the Nervous System, they will be found unsurpassed. It requires only one trial to convince the most skeptical of their superiority. There is an idea for you, gentlemen! pufflers! put in your pipes and smoke."

SONS OF TEMPERANCE. There was a large gathering of this order, on Tuesday night at Town Hall made up of our own citizens, and delegations from Boston, Charlestown, Cambridge, Weymouth and Stoughton.—There were about five hundred present.—After the business and toils of the evening had been dispensed with, the numerous company sat down to a most excellent Chowder, whose exhilarating influence, made all stimulating beverages unnecessary, and to forget in the pleasures of the moment, the vices and evils of poor suffering humanity."

THE NIAGARA COMPANY received a most cordial welcome on their return from the field of their exploits at Worcester, 5th inst.

They arrived about 3 o'clock, hale and hearty, and were taken in charge by the Tiger Company, who escorted them through some of our principal streets, to their head quarters, on School street, where a feast was awaiting them, "fit for the gods." They looked the honors of the day in fine style."

Full particulars of their journey out and back, with other incidents, will appear in our next."

DANCING SCHOOL. Professor Walker it will be seen by his advertisement, will commence to-day, another course of lessons in music and dancing,—to which we would respectfully call the attention of our citizens. The success of Professor W. with his school in this town last spring, to say nothing of that of other places, and the general satisfaction which he gave to both parent and pupil, is the best testimony we have to offer in his favor. We speak confidently, without a shadow of doubt, that another successful season is open before him."

HOOK AND LADDER COMPANY, No. 1.—Richard Newcomb, Capt., held their first regular meeting in the house recently built for them on Canal street, near Hancock.

The occasion was used to dedicate the new building; and at an early hour the Company sat down to a most delicious Clam Chowder, which touched a sympathetic chord, and opened a vein of good humor. After discussing the merits of other good things, they retired to their neat, tasteful, and spacious hall, and there closed the festivities of the evening in a real, substantial, old fashioned dance. By this time, the house was thoroughly and effectually dedicated."

A REVOLUTION IN THE CARPET TRADE. It is no longer necessary to pay the large profits which has usually been asked for the finer qualities of Carpets. The day has come when the humble cottager of limited means can tread on and enjoy the beautiful Brussels, or dip their feet deep in velvet roses of Persia's products."

The system adopted by the New England Carpet Company of cutting down the exorbitant prices of the finer qualities has made the old fogey dealers cry—too cheap! too cheap! How can Carpets which cost from $1 to $2 per yard be afforded for four or five cents advance?

Very easily done; universal knowledge of the FACT, and assurance that it may be relied on, has given this company the immense trade which they enjoy. They act upon the principles that by supplying the public demand on more favorable terms than any one else, they can sweep all the trade worth having, and that small advances on cost accumulated larger profits than great advances with small sales. Their Warehouse is located on the corner of Hanover and Elm streets.—Boston Bee.

We learn that the Rev. J. Pratt, of Portland, Me., is to preach in the Orthodox Church, to-morrow, (Sunday) evening, at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Two Singular Phenomena.

In July, 1658, the citizens in the town of Windham, Connecticut, were one night suddenly aroused from their quiet slumbers by a boisterous piping noise: some expected to see an army of French and Indians; others feared an earthquake, and the dissolution of all earthly things—the consternation was universal—old and young, male and female, fled naked from their beds, with worse shriekings than those made by the besieging army. After a flight of half a mile, and having summoned up all their resolution took a defensive stand; when, presently they distinctly heard from the enemy's camp the words, Ugh Helderkin Dier Yet. This last they thought meant treachery, and plucking up courage, they sent a triumvirate to capitulate with the supposed French and Indians. They appeared in their shirts and begged to speak with the General; but no answer was given. They began to be greatly agitated, between hope and fear; at length, however, they discovered that the dreaded inimical army that had taken possession of their town, was an army of Frogs, led on by a band of piping bull-frog, which had so unceremoniously called them from their homes: matters were amicably settled, and they retired to their respective quarters."

This quaint old legend was forcibly brought to mind, on reading the remarks made by the oracle of the Republicans, at their recent convention. Mr. Banks there speaks of foreigners coming over "in clouds," and especially the prospect there is of the Chinese taking possession of this country. Very likely we shall awake some of these mornings and find our dwellings and places of business occupied by our celestial enemies, having been showered down during the night, from some of those emigrant clouds, and making a quiet breakfast off some of our neighbors' rats and mice—their favorite dish. And we shaking in our shoes, thinking our turn may come next. Then, also, will our streets resound with the unwelcome music, of,

"The Chinese are coming, O! Ho; O! Ho. Thus hath it been decreed and so must it be, that the good old Anglo-Saxon rule and race must yield to the superiority of the Mandarin."

PETER PEPPER.

Lines

Written on the death of two dear little boys.

Two tender plants from you were snatched,
And by their Saviour taken,
To bloom with Him in Paradise,
In that bright garden—Heaven.

Those little plants you thought to raise
And cherish them with care—
You saw those little buds unfold
And breathed a silent prayer.

That God would spare those precious ones
To comfort you while here—
But He saw fit to take them home
To dwell in that bright sphere.

You sit and think of those dear ones,
That once were your delight;
But Death, the Fell-destroyer came—
They withered at his sight.

Their little toys are laid aside,
Mementoes of the past:
You love to gaze upon them now,
Although the tears come fast:

Sometimes, you fancy you can hear,
Their childish prattle now;
But soon, to a soon, you find
The vision flown. And how?

Why they are gone, far, far away,
To that bright happy shore,
Where the weary are at rest,
And troubles come no more.

Their little forms are laid
Within the silent tomb;
They sleep the sleep of death,
That sleep, which brings a gloom.

But we must look beyond
The portals of the tomb,
For the dear departed ones,
And think we'll meet them soon.

Together hand in hand
They walk the golden streets:
With crowns upon their heads,
They'll sit at Jesus' feet.

Then mourn no more for them;
Since they have gone to rest;
Their wearied heads repose,
Upon the Saviour's breast.

Poetry.

One Hundred Years Hence.

Who'll throng these streets in eager haste,
One hundred years from now,
And mammon's fleeting phantoms chase
With care worn, anxious brow?
To gain a name
For wealth or fame—
Ambition's god,
Or honor's scroll—
Who, who will be that spell-bound throng,
Passing with hasty steps along,
One hundred years from now?

Where, O where will be the men,
One hundred years from now,
Who now the virtuous poor condemn,
With purse-proud haughty brow?
Who give a sneer
To misery's tear—
To wretched relief
To orphan's grief—
Where, O where will be their pride,
When rich and poor lie side by side,
One hundred years from now?

Where, where will be those forms of grace,
One hundred years from now,
Who lure us in the giddy chase,
And at whose shrine we bow?
The raptur'd kites,
The dream of bliss,
The plighted vow
Of lovers now?

Where, where can be the hope and fears,
Those lovers' smiles, and anxious tears,
One hundred years from now?
Who'll grace our courts, as judges grave,
One hundred years from now,
Nor warp the law, nor screen the knave,
When wealth and influence bow?
With bribes of gold,
And crimes unfold,
Make justice sleep,
And mercy weep.

Who, who will be those jurists pure,
And bribes and sycophants shun,
One hundred years from now?
Who'll guard our rights o'er land and sea,
One hundred years from now,
Stand to the banner of the free,
And dare confront a foe;
And never yield,
O'er flood and field,
And do no wrong—
Submit to none?

Who, who will be those patriots brave,
To guard our flag o'er land and wave,
One hundred years from now?
Where, where will be the proud despots be,
One hundred years from now,
Who'd make the germ of liberty,
And make the nations free?
They'll be forgot—
Their names will rot,
Nor nations heed,
Their tombs lie dead.

And that fair goddess, Liberty,
Will reign o'er every land and sea,
One hundred years from now.

Pride.

'Tis a curious fact as ever was known,
But often in human nature shown,
Alike in the castle and cottage,
That pride like a pipe of a certain sort,
Will manage to live and thrive on food
As poor as pauper's pottage!

Of all the noxious things on earth,
The queerest thing is the pride of birth,
Among our "free and democratic" folk,
A bridge across a hundred years—
Without a prop to save from sneers—
Not even a couple of piers—
A thing for laughter, doubt and jeers,
Is American aristocracy!

Depend upon it, my snobbish friend,
Your family thread you can't ascend
Without good reason to approach
You may find it waxed at the other end
By some plian valet—
Or, worse than that, your boasted line
May end in a loop of stronger twine,
That played some worthy relation.

Because you flourish in worldly affairs,
Don't be haughty and put on airs,
With insolent pride of station;
Don't be proud, and turn your nose
At poorer people in plainer clothes,
But learn, for the sake of our kind's repose,
That all proud flesh, wherever it grows,
Is subject to irritation!

Anecdotes.

A negro, named Jake, who had absented himself during the night and already was in imagination the whip which was to scourge him for his disobedience, was thus accosted by a fellow-laborer, as he entered the field for his day's work—
"Jake, where is de prov?"
"Long de harur, said Jake."
"Well, where is de harur?"
"Long de prov."
"Where be de dem?"
"Bof, together, you darkee. What for you want to pick a quarrel dis morning?"

A long-legged Yankee, on visiting a magazine for the first time, while standing around the pavilion, suddenly came to the elephant; whereupon he turned to the keeper with surprise and said:
"Mister, what critter have you got there, with a tail on both ends?"

Joseph, where is Africa?
On the map, sir.
I mean Joseph, on what continent, the eastern or western?
Well, the land of Africa is on the eastern continent, but the people all of 'em are from South.
How do the African people live?
By drawing.
By drawing what, water?
No sir; by drawing their breath.
Sit down, Joseph.

John, stop your crying, said an enraged father to his son, who had kept up an intolerable wail for the past five minutes.
"Stop, I say, do you hear?" again repeated the father, after a few minutes, the boy still crying.
"You don't suppose I can choke off in a minute, do you chimed in the urchin."

Pure Air.

The air we breathe is composed of one part oxygen and four parts nitrogen. The former supports life, the latter extinguishes it. The more oxygen there is, the livelier, the healthier, and the more joyful are we; the more nitrogen, the more sleepy, stupid, dull, and inactive we become. But if all the air was oxygen, the first lighted match would wrap the world in instant flame; if all were nitrogen, the next instant, there would not be upon the populated globe a single living creature.

When oxygen was discovered by Priestly, nearly eighty years ago, there was a universal jubilation among doctors and chemists. The argument was plausible, and seemed perfectly convincing. "If oxygen is the life and health of the atmosphere, as we have found out how to make oxygen, we have only to increase the quantity in the air we breathe, in order to wake up new life, to give health to the diseased, and youth to the aged. But, on trial, it was found that it made man a maniac or a fool, and, if continued, a corpse! Various other experiments have been made to improve upon the handiwork of the all-wise Maker of the universe, but they have been successive failures, and thinking men have long since come to the conclusion, that as there can be no improvement upon the cold water of the first creation, in slaking thirst, so there can be no addition made to pure air, which will better answer its life-sustaining purposes.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Sept. 19th, 1857.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

ACCIDENT WITH LOSS OF LIFE. Thomas Broderick, a laboring man in the employ of Dea. Hollis, of Braintree, accidentally fell from a load of hay, on Wednesday last, which he had taken from the marshes near Neponset, fracturing his skull so severely, that he died about noon, the day following. The deceased was about forty years of age.

A POISONING CASE. There was a suspicion that James A. Younman, of Boonville, (N. Y.) who died under singular circumstances, had been poisoned by his wife. The parties had separated, and Mrs. Y. for some months cohabited with one Dean. She afterwards went to live with her husband, and he was in a brief time removed from this world. The stomach of Younman was sent to Albany and examined, and the result of the coroner's inquest was to hold Mrs. Y. for murder. She is the daughter of Abijah Higgin, of Turin, a man of considerable wealth. Mrs. Sarah Brand, a sister of the deceased, is charged with being accessory to the murder, but the evidence did not warrant a verdict against her. The Bonville Herald gives all the testimony in the case, which it comments on as follows:

"It presents on the part of the woman throughout, a kind of recklessness seldom reached by human depravity. The Bonville case, that happened in this country some years since, is not a circumstance to this in feehness and utter lack of sympathy; and the testimony reveals a plot rivaling the Cunningham affair. The excitement consequent upon it, in Ava and this town, is unbounded; to think that she could have stood by the bed of her dying husband, and as he called for something to allay his sufferings, kept dealing out a little more poison, for four whole days, we think presents a want of feeling unparalleled in the annals of crime."

PROFESSOR WALKER commenced his school at the Hancock House, on Saturday last, under the most flattering circumstances. Over forty enrolled their names for a new course. Many of his old scholars, were so well pleased with their teacher, that they have put themselves again under his instruction. The prospect now is, that he will be more successful this season, even than the last. Milton too, has also extended to him the same liberal encouragement.

Dry Goods. We would call the attention of our readers to the large and valuable stock of Dry Goods, now offered by our friends, Geo. W. Warren, Barry & Co., No. 192 Washington and 55 and 57 Hawley streets, Boston. They are prepared to furnish their customers, with as rich and choice a variety of Fall and Winter Goods as can be found in the city, and at prices satisfactory to purchasers. See their advertisement in our columns.

A CANCER weighing between two and three pounds was removed from the breast of Mrs. Burt, of South Reading, on Tuesday last, by Dr. Green, at the Indian Medical Institute, 35 Broomfield Street, Boston. The success of Dr. Green has established beyond all question the curability of the terrible disease.

Democratic Convention.

The Democratic party of this State met in Convention at the Tremont Temple, in Boston, on Wednesday last. The Convention was numerously attended, and the best of feeling prevailed. At 10 1/2 o'clock they were called to order by A. H. Howland, of New Bedford, Chairman of the State Central Committee.

On motion of Mr. O'Neil, Samuel W. Walden, Jr. of Boston, was chosen temporary Chairman.

Hon. Isaac Davis, of Worcester, was chosen President of the Convention, who on taking the chair, made a short speech replete with the principles and duties of the party.

Vice Presidents, one from each county, were appointed by the committee on organizations. Henry Wood, Esq., of this town, represented the county of Norfolk.

The motion of Mr. Kelly, of East Boston, that the Hon. Erasmus D. Beach, of Springfield, receive the nomination by acclamation, as candidate for Governor, was confirmed with the greatest enthusiasm.

Hon. Albert Carrier, of Newburyport received the nomination for Lieut. Governor.

The remaining State officers were as follows:

Secretary of State—Jonathan E. Field of Stockbridge.

Treasurer—Charles Thompson of Charles town.

Auditor—Seymour L. Meade, of Nantucket.

Attorney General—Ezra Wilkinson of Dedham.

Many spirited resolutions were passed, from which we copy the few following extracts:

Resolved, That the platform of principles enunciated and established by the National Democratic Convention meet our entire approval.

Resolved, That the doctrines upon which our Territorial policy is now conducted, are calculated, in the highest degree, to realize the idea of a government by the people.

Resolved, That the administration of James Buchanan commands our unqualified approval. His distinguished abilities, ripe experience, and extensive knowledge of public affairs, eminently fit him for the exalted position to which he has been called by the suffrages of his countrymen.

Resolved, That the recent reckless prostitution of the religious office to the low purposes of partisan warfare, as exhibited by many public teachers of the Gospel, during the late presidential campaign, merits the "withering condemnation" of every good citizen, not only for its dangerous tendency to bring about a union of Church and State, and its lamentable illustration of the folly of "The blind leading the blind," but also, and far more, for its deleterious effect, upon the cause of religion; sowing the seeds of strife and dissension in parishes and churches, degrading the proper influence of the sacred teacher, and paving the way to religious infidelity.

Resolved, That the political campaign upon which we are just entering, is one of vital importance to the people of Massachusetts. The administration of the state government, has become a by-word and a reproach, our best interests have been sacrificed to the folly and cupidity of our legislators and rulers, our state plunged hopelessly into debt, its character and fair fame prostituted to personal and sectional aims, its tax payers oppressed and insulted until forbearance has ceased to be a virtue.

The people want legislators who will honestly appropriate their hard earned means to the payment of their debts, instead of squandering them upon partisans in Kansas; who deem the rights and interests of the white men of Massachusetts at least equally deserving of their attentions as the negro of the south; who will relieve the state from the foul disgrace of rebellion against the General Government.

The Convention adjourned about 4 1/2 o'clock with bright hopes, and renewed pledges of fidelity to their cause.

For the Patriot.

A little Learning makes a man mad.

The youthful president of the juvenile assemblage at Worcester, on the 5th inst. got off the following quaint and bombastic effusion:

"I cannot find language proper to be used in introducing Mr. Banks. There is no language adequate," says he, "There he is." Pointing to a very small man in a corner.

Some of the audience were for taking it as a joke, others as an insult, but a second look at the speaker showed how matters stood, and they thought it the most prudent to pass it over in silence.

We have had many difficulties to encounter this week in getting out our sheet. The incessant click of the carpenter's hammer was very annoying. The fact is, the growth of the Patriot has been such, that we have had to enlarge our premises. In future, we shall be better able to accommodate our friends. With more room and a larger expenditure.

Loss of a California Steamer.

FOUNDING of the Steamship Central America from California, off Cape Hatteras, on Saturday evening last, at about 8 o'clock. She is said to have on board, 555 passengers, and 104 officers and crew. There it said to have been on board two millions of treasure including four hundred thousand remitted from Havana which is principally insured in London. The Bark Eloise which arrived at Norfolk, 18th inst. rescued fifty passengers, including twenty-six females. The officers of the steamer are all lost except Frazer, the second mate. It is also stated that twenty-eight females were taken off by a brig.

We understand that Mr. L. K. Conley, from Portland, (Me.), will speak in Johnson's Hall, to-morrow morning at 10 3/4, and in the afternoon at 2 1/2 o'clock. We also learn that Mr. C. is one of the most able trans-speakers now before the public.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 5th inst., Thomas A. son of Mr. Charles Taylor, aged 5 years and 7 months.

Slumber sweetly, little Tommie. Life's rude storms with thee are o'er, Pain and sorrow, grief and trouble, Ne'er shall harm thee, evermore.

Hushed are now thy tones of laughter, Motionless thy little form, Dimmed thy smiling orbs of azure, By the dark and chilling storm.

Five short years thy presence gave us Sunlight to our pleasant home; Oh! how hard it was to give thee To the dark and silent tomb.

But we trust thou'lt live in heaven, Pillowed on thy Saviour's breast; May his presence, bright and holy, Give thy sorrowing parents rest.

On the 5th inst., suddenly, Mrs. Lydia, wife of John R. Pratt, Esq., of New York, aged 41 years.

By this sudden death a husband is bereft of a fond and faithful wife; and children of a kind and affectionate mother.

On the 12th inst., Nettie Jane, only child of Mr. Richard G. and Mrs. Ellen M. Elliott, aged 7 months.

A few short fleeting months have past, Since to our home was given, A tiny bud of promise rare,— A precious gift from Heaven.

It just began to open its leaves, And fragrance round us shed, When lo! it withered, drooped and died; And our bright hope had fled.

Our little Nettie was that bud, That precious gift from Heaven, And our fond aching hearts are full, With sorrow well-nigh riven.

The sunlight of her presence gone, We weep sad bitter tears; How winning were her ways; her voice Was music in our ears!

Yet joy we that an angel hand, From her bright heavenly clime, So gently bore her spirit hence, While in life's sweet spring-time!

Sweet bud of promise-passing sweet! The solace of an hour, Now blooming bright in Paradise, A fair immortal flower! M. A.

On the 13th inst., Mr. Samuel Andrews, aged 92 years, 6 months and 27 days. On the 15th inst., Horace Augustus, son of Mr. Geo. S. and Mrs. Elizabeth Bemis, aged 4 months and 5 days.

SUNDAY—church doors enter in.
Rest from toil, repent of sin;
Strive a heavenly rest to win.

MONDAY—to your calling go;
Serve the Lord, love friend and foe;
To the temple, answer, No!

TUESDAY—do what good you can;
Live in peace with every man;
Remember life is but a span.

WEDNESDAY—give away and earn,
Teach some truth, some good thing learn;
Joyful, good for all return.

THURSDAY—build your house upon
Christ, the mighty Corner Stone;
Whom God helps, his work is done.

FRIDAY—for the truth be strong;
Own your fault if it be wrong;
Put a bride on your tongue.

SATURDAY—thank God and sing;
Tribute to Heaven's treasure bring,
Be prepared for Teror's King.

The Ruins of a Mind.

The troubled ocean in the storm,
The oak by lightning riven;
The earth by wind and tempest torn,
The angry work of Heaven;
The earthquake, hurricane, and all
That nature's rage produces,
Can never be compared at all,
With mind that man abuses.

The mind by evil passions torn,
By envy, pride or hatred,
Emotions all in business born,
By folly generated,
They tear, convulse and overthrow
All that there was adorning,
And dismal wrecks the noonday show,
The blasted hopes of morning.

Sad to the mind its cruel lot,
When bosom friend turns traitor,
When persecution pours his shot
And harrows up all nature;
Ah, then all seed is sown in vain,
Each noble germ is blasted,
All efforts then must end in pain,
And life and mind are wasted.

Reckless the heart that thus annoys,
A friend and fellow creature,
Reckless the heart that thus destroys
Each mental form and feature;
No crime of savage man can name,
Is fouler or more wicked,
To rend alive on racks of hate,
And mock the pains inflicted.

And there are other wasting ills
The glorious mind infesting,
Pleasure, neglect, and indolence,
Like blackening clouds fast rising,
And gathering darkness deep around,
And charged with horror sweeping,
They burst; and morning's hopeful sound,
Ends in a night of weeping.

The ruins of a noble mind,
Is ever more appalling,
That man on earth can ever find,
From towns or castles falling,
The funeral—poor or bloody sword
And all their dismal doings,
A sadder sight cannot afford,
Than mind of man in ruins.

Enter the pile by mercy's hands,
For lazar's touch;
There pained humanity must stand
Astonished or dejected,
To view the wide spread ruin where
Ruin unmixed with fiction,
The man's rage, the idiot's stare,
The worst of all affliction.

O, meet man, whose favored life,
No persecutions torture,
Whose sound and healthy views all strive,
His mind to raise by culture,
That work of time—that work of praise,
Work only worth the doing,
The only temple man can raise,
That will not end in ruin.

Anecdotes.

Children ask some funny questions. A little boy came home from Sabbath school one day, and meeting his mother, the following dialogue took place:

Mamma!—
Well, my dear?
The teacher says people are all made of dust.
Yes, my dear, so the bible says!
And are white people made of dust, too?
Yes.
Well, then, I suppose colored people are made out of coal dust, aren't they?

A loafer who had been fined several weeks in succession for getting drunk, coolly proposed to the judge that he should take him by the year at a reduced rate.

When Fenelon was almoner to Louis XIV, his majesty was astonished to find, on Sunday, instead of a numerous congregation, only him and the priest.

What is the reason of this? asked the King.
I caused it to be given out, sir, returned Fenelon, that you might know who came to worship God, and who to flatter the King.

A rich officer of revenue one day asked a man of wit, what sort of a thing opulence was.

It is a thing, replied the philosopher, which can give a rascal the advantage over an honest man.

Crow, I want to ax you a quandum.
Well, Julius, succeed, I see open to the question.

Can you tell me why de art of self-defence am like a ribber at de tide?

No, Julius, I doesn't see any similarity in the two subjects.

Well, then, I tell you. It is simply 'kase t develops de muscles.

And 38 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. All the deleterious matter extracted in that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package and warranting the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soaps, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.

12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for making soft soap.

Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sal Soda.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.

(All the above directions accompany the can.)

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked; thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first, (name and picture, twisted Loaf-bread, with a glass effecting water on the top, as you see in the bill.)

Full directions for making Bread with Sour Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry; also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Seidlitz Powders, will accompany each package.

Miscellaneous.

A Fortunate Ruin.

George Ballerton sat in his room in his hotel. He was a young man of six and twenty, tall and slim of frame, with a face of exceeding intellectual beauty, and dressed in costly garments, though his toilette was but indifferently performed. He was an orphan, and for some years had boarded at the hotel. It required but a single glance into his pale features to tell that he was an invalid. He sat with his head resting upon his hands, and his whole frame would ever and anon tremble, as though with some powerful emotion.

As the youth sat, thus, his door was opened and an elderly gentleman entered.

Ah, doctor, you are moving early this morning, said Ballerton, as he lazily rose from his seat, and extended his hand.

O! not early for me, George, returned Allyn, with a bright smile. I am an early bird.

Poetry.

The Unseen Battlefield.

There is an unseen battlefield
In every human breast,
Where two opposing forces meet,
But where they seldom rest.

That field is veiled from mortal sight,
'Tis only seen by one
Who knows alone where victory lies,
When each day's fight is done.

One army clusters strong and fierce,
Their chief of demon form;
His brow is like the thunder cloud,
His voice the bursting storm.

His captains, Pride, and Lust and Hate,
Whose troops watch night and day,
Swift to detect the weakest point,
And thirsting for the fray.

Contending with this mighty force
Is but a little band;
Yet there is an unquailing front,
Those warriors firmly stand!

Their leader is of God-light form,
Of countenance serene;
And glowing on his naked breast
A simple cross is seen.

His captains, Faith, and Hope, and Love,
Point to that wondrous sign,
And gazing on it, all receive Strength from a source divine.

They feel it speaks a glorious truth,
A truth as great as ours,
That to be victors they must learn
To love, to confide, to endure.

That faith sublime, in wildest strife,
Imports a holy calm;
For every deadly blow a shield,
For every wound a balm.

And when they win that battlefield,
That toil is quite forgot;
The plain where carnage once had reigned,
Becomes a hallowed spot.

A spot where flowers of joy and peace
Spring from the fertile sod,
And breathe perfume of their praise
On every breeze—to God.

Our Happiest Days.

They tell me, Love, that you and I
Our happiest days are living,
While yet is shut from either's eye
The change that waits on living.
Ah! life they say is a weary way,
With less of joy than sorrow,
For where the sunlight falls to-day
There'll be a shade to-morrow.

If ours be love that will not fail,
The test of change and sorrow,
And only deeper channels wear
In passing to each morrow;
Then better were it that to-day
We fervently were praying,
That what we have may pass away
While we the words were saying.

The heart hath depths of bitterness
As well as depths of pleasure,
And those who love, love not unless
They both of these can measure;
There is a time, and it will come,
When this they must discover,
And woe it either then be dumb
To power that moved the Lover!

There are some spots where each will fall,
And each will need sustaining;
And suffering is the lot of all;
And is of God's ordaining;
Then wherefore do our hearts mislead
In bonds that none can sever,
If not to bless each changing night,
And strengthen each endeavor?

Then while these happy days we bless,
Let us no doubt be sowing;
God's mercy never will be less,
Though he should change the sowing;
Such be our faith as on we tread,
Each trusting and obeying,
As two who by His hand are led,
And hear what He is saying.

Evening.

The sun hath sunk behind the hill,
But over earth, and sky, and air,
Ere's crimson tints are glowing still,
And tidings of to-morrow's day.

Thus hope, when sinks life's happiness,
Upon our night of sorrow glows,
Promising brighter, endless bliss,
After our pilgrimage of woes.

The longing heart, whose wishes spring
To fond forbidding's unknown land,
Borrow's imagination's wing,
Though fettered here in reason's hand.

Persuasive! whither wouldst thou fly?
Earth's vapors mock thee eye of clay,
Mark crimson evening's golden sky,
And hope the morrow's promised day.

Anecdotes.

During a late thunder storm at Greenville, S. C., the lightning struck a mill, knocking over two negroes who were at work in it. As soon as they regained their feet, the first exclamation of one of them was,
"Who fired dat gun?"

Some people have an adequate idea of heaven as the good woman whom the neighbor was consoling for the loss of her son. If his grandmother is in heaven, sobbing the poor woman, I know she won't see Billy abused!

A peasant went to his priest to confess having stolen hay from a large stack belonging to a neighbor.

"How many loads did you take?" asked the father confessor.

"You may as well reckon the whole stack at once, said the peasant, as I and my wife intend to fetch it all before we stop."

Finn, the celebrated comedian, once stumbled over a lot of wooden ware in front of a man's store, whereupon the shopkeeper cried out—
"You came near kicking the bucket, this time, mister!"

"O, no, said Finn, quite complacently, I only turned a little pale."

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having such reliable standard for the strength of POT-ASH. The standard has become so general,
that it has, notwithstanding its valuable property, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of substituting his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated
with salt, which is destructive in making soap;
it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle,
being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid
in many cases, and very troublesome to the re-quirer.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes,
always being the same strength, and producing
the same results; and will warrant it in all cases,
if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease
into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft
soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Laundries and Hotels.
Directions for cleaning cotton and wool, that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sulphur.

Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,

IS prepared entirely different from other Saleratus.
All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cakes, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, completely nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one box you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like
the first, (name and picture, twisted Lead-bread, with a glass reflecting water on the top, as you
see in the bill.)

Full directions for making Bread with Sour
Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry;
for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Scalding Powders, will accompany each package.
